

Australian Wheat Crop to be Much Short

Harvesting will Reach Its Peak Soon—Carryover is Negligible—No Export to United States.

The 1935-36 wheat crop in Australia will again be below the average, although possibly slightly higher than last year's production, according to a cable received by the bureau of agricultural economics from the international institute of agriculture at Rome.

The first official estimate places the crop at 135,000,000 bushels from 11,970,000 acres, compared with 133,489,000 bushels from 12,567,000 acres in 1934-35. The estimate is about 27 per cent below the average production of 184,471,000 bushels for the five years 1929 to 1934.

Harvesting of the new crop is under way in several sections, but will not be at its peak until some time the middle or latter part of this month.

The domestic utilization of wheat in Australia averages around 55,000,000 bushels annually. Since the old crop carry-over at the end of the current season on November 30, is expected to be negligible, the surplus available for export and for carry-over during 1936 will be about 80,000,000 bushels compared with 118,000,000 bushels in 1935 and 134,000,000 bushels in 1934.

Australian wheat exports go largely to the United Kingdom, China and Japan, with very little coming to the United States.

The reduction of 5 per cent in wheat acreage this year was due chiefly to uncertainty of world wheat prices at sowing time and to partial failure of autumn rains which retarded sowing. Fair to good rains in August improved crop prospects in Victoria, southern Australia and the western part of Australia. In New South Wales, the largest producing state, conditions are reported as variable.

Farm Picture in Nebraska Shows Big Improvement

Plenty of Feed in Most Sections, an Average Corn Crop Generally, and Few Foreclosures.

Sidney, Neb., Nov. 8.—The end of another crop year in this section of Nebraska has revealed, agricultural observers say, vast improvement in the general agricultural picture, partly because of government aid, but mostly through the return of normal weather conditions.

Stocks of feed on hand are a contrast to a year ago, when farmers were rapidly disposing of livestock because they were unable to produce or buy feed, the Cheyenne county agricultural agent's office reports.

Depleted livestock supplies are being replenished and another year is expected to see normal supplies on most farms.

The report of better farming conditions comes from various agencies which have dealt with farmers during the past four years. The Sidney federal land bank office was the first to reveal general improvement, with the statement that only four foreclosures have been necessary in more than two thousand loans. Later, relief officials said no farmers in the county now are receiving direct relief.

Black stem rust riddled the 1935 wheat crop, but western Nebraska farmers scored with a record corn yield to offset part of this loss. Little of the panhandle corn crop will be put on the market, as growers plan to fatten livestock and gain this indirect profit from their corn.
