Enforcement of Egg Candling Law is Backed

Representatives of Poultry Industry From Over the State Favor Other Regulation.

Grand Island—More than 60 men, representing every phase of the poultry and egg industry, expressed favor for strict enforcement of the state egg candling law at the closing session late Tuesday of the statewide conference held here under auspices of the state department of agriculture.

The group also favored a plan to appoint a committee, representative of the industry as a whole, to cooperate with agriculture department officials in drafting amendments to improve existing laws regulating the industry, or in the creation of new laws and regulations which would benefit the business. The committee will be named by W. B. Banning, state department director.

Speakers at the afternoon session included Dr. L. Van Es of the agricultural college; Earl Smiley, secretary of the Nebraska Poultry association; G. O. George, secretary of the Nebraska Co-operative Creamery association; D. E. Holcomb, Clay Center, and W. W. Dayton of Omaha.

In his talk, Dr. Van Es said while there were about 57 varieties of diseases which affect chickens and other barnyard fowls, only a few were of relative economic importance—those which spread among the flocks and take a heavy toll of birds.

A uniform system of grading eggs and poultry were regarded by Smiley in his address as a necessary "reform" in Nebraska. He added that the production of high class eggs was a mere matter of correct breeding of birds.

George sounded a warning that eastern poultry men were giving much attention to the production of quality poultry and that Nebraska breeders would have to show similar enterprise if they desired to remain in business.

Improvement of the flocks was seen by Dayton as a means by which Nebraska could compete with the eastern markets. The trend now, he said, is toward better grades of eggs and better classes of poultry. Too often, he said, eggs were held gathered after remaining in the nest too long, then held for several days or a week in warm places, and by the time they reached the market they were "slightly ripe."
