JEWELRY STORE ROBBED

Dayton, O.—Four robbers held up the Sol Partner jewelry store and escaped with silverware and jewels valued by the owners at $60,000. One of the robbers stood guard at the door, while the other three leisurely cleaned out showcases and shelves after forcing Sol Partner, the proprietor and Albert Fornas, L. C. Lehman and Stanley Watson, clerks, to the rear of the place. They escaped in a car.

Fall River, Mass.—Two masked holdup men robbed a paymaster of a $4,500 payroll in the yard of the Parker mill. A disarmed policeman saved $3,000 by fleeing from the robbers who shot at him several times. Paymaster Henry Sherman of Westport and Patrolman Thomas H. Ryan were ordered to put up their hands as they entered the mill yard. The robbers took Ryan's pistol and ordered the pair to turn over two money boxes.

POWER MARKETS DEFINED

North Platte.—Nebraska markets for electricity were defined Wednesday by Robert R. Fulton, electrical engineer for the Platte Valley Public Power and Irrigation district, as he gave his deposition to attorneys for five power companies seeking to halt the proposed co-ordination of Nebraska's three large hydroelectric projects.

Fulton, who was on the stand all day, also was called on to discuss the effect the proposed relationship of the Platte Valley and Central Nebraska (Tri-County) Public Power and Irrigation districts might have on power conditions.

The engineer followed Gerald V. Gentleman, secretary of the Platte Valley district, to the stand.

Good Day for Farm Family a Program Basis

All Ages to Be Represented at Achievement Day Summaries in the State.

Thousands of Nebraska farm and town women have started celebrating the close of their project club year by holding county achievement programs which will continue for six weeks. The 1935-36 year has been one of the most successful ever sponsored for rural women by the college of agriculture extension service.

Miss Mary-Ellen Brown, in charge of the home demonstration project work in Nebraska, says more than 26,000 women enrolled last fall. Thousands more are expected to attend the achievement days.

Each program includes a panel discussion centered around, "What makes a good day for the farm family?" This is a new method of presenting interesting information and is rapidly becoming popular thruout the country. There are to be no formal speeches, but free discussion between members of the panel.

Speakers on each panel will include a grandmother, a mother with boys and girls in high school, who will present some of the present day problems the young mother with children, bringing up questions on how to find time to do all the things necessary and yet establish a good family relationship, a father who will explain what starts the day off right for him. Other viewpoints will be presented by a farm boy and a county agricultural agent.

An exhibit is also planned for achievement days. Community singing will open each program. A report of the "Leap Year" committee together with resignation of leadership, is on the program.

FULL RADIO TIME GRANTED TO KMA

Washington, April 7.—The communications commission Tuesday granted radio station KMA at Shenandoah, Ia., full-time operation and denied a renewal of license to KGBZ at York, Neb.

The two stations had been sharing time on the same frequency and each sought unlimited hours at the expense of the other.

START POTATO PLANTING

Shelton, Neb.—Potato growers in this section of the Platte valley are preparing to begin planting their tubers. A few growers who planted some ground to potatoes before the recent severe cold spell express the belief that they will have to replant. The zero temperature a week ago penetrated deeply into the ground.

What Will 1936 Hold For American Farmer?

Soil Conservation Main Object of New Federal Agricultural Program

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Will 1936 see farm income in the United States fall below the level of 1935?

Has the invalidation of the AAA paved the way for farm overproduction?

Will farmers co-operate under the new soil conservation and domestic allotment act or not? These three questions haunt government planners as they struggle with the problem of preventing additional millions of acres of soil from being despoiled, while huge surpluses of wheat and corn rot in elevators and on farms, and farm income threatens to return to the depression level.

Back of it all lies the decision of the supreme court barring the federal government from entering into contract with the individual farmers on crop control. The only alternative to the conditions of 1932 is the problematic voluntary co-operation of the farmers with the new soil conservation and crop allotment plan.

To clearly understand what problems face the federal and state governments, it is necessary to examine the records of farm production since 1932. In that year farm income fell to $5,000,000,000, the lowest depression point. Huge farm crop surpluses piled up when national farm income declined. In 1933 the AAA was enacted, giving the federal farm authorities power to negotiate with the individual farmers. In simplest terms the AAA involved the payment to the farmers of millions of dollars to compensate them for loss of income from acreage on which they did not raise crops. In other words the farmer was paid to reduce his farm production of certain basic commodities. The idea was to regulate supply to demand.

Farm Income on Increase

The effect of this plan is shown in the figures on farm incomes for 1932 and 1934. In 1933, the value of farm products had increased to $5,985, 000,000 including both crops and livestock. To this was added the benefit payments under the AAA of $271,000,000, bringing the gross national farm income to $6,256,000,000. This increase in income was the direct result of curbing production and stabilizing prices.

In 1934, $583,000,000 was paid in benefits. The farm income totaled $7,163,000,000. Last year the combined income was $8,130,000,000, of which the government paid $500,000,000.

This year—the supreme court having killed the AAA—the only hope of maintaining the farm income level lies in the extent of the farmers' co-operation with soil conservation measures.

Soil Conservation Urged.

The soil conservation act offers the farmers $470,000,000 for turning back 30,000,000 acres of farm lands to soil-building crops. Since most of the basic commodity crops, such as grains, tobacco and cotton are soil depleting, it is the hope of those who framed the act that by benefit payments the farmers will be switched from overproduction of these soil-depleting crops to crops that will enrich the top soil of this vast acreage. But, unlike the AAA, the conservation act leaves a loophole through which the farmer can evade the issue and still collect his benefit. He can continue to plant as many acres as he pleases to soil-depleting crops, but at the same time reduce acreage which he now has planted in other than basic crops. For instance, instead of cutting down his acreage in wheat from 1,000 acres to 850 acres, the farmer who owns other acreage, say in flax or rye or barley, can reduce this latter the required 15 per cent.

Federal authorities fear that this may be the farmer's choice in 1936. If this should happen, it would mean $500,000,000 thrown to the winds, but to the 32,779,000 persons engaged in agricultural pursuits, it would mean a slump in income, huge crop surpluses and the privations of 1932 back again.

ALLAN COLLAPSES, DIES

Omaha.—James Allan, Ralston, died of a cerebral hemorrhage less than an hour after he collapsed at a political rally over which he was presiding.

Mr. Allan, owner and president of the Allan Ice Machine company of South Omaha, was seated at the front of the town hall conversing with two close friends. They were awaiting Congressman McLaughlin, scheduled to speak before the 200 people who had gathered for the meeting of the Ralston McLaughlin club.

Taken to his home in the Lakewood club grounds, Mr. Allan died a short time after a physician arrived. McLaughlin, who reached the hall later, expressed deep regret at the death of his close friend, and greatly shortened his political comment.
