Bible School Lesson Study!

Sunday, June 14th

By L. Neitzel, Murdock, Neb.

"Jesus Crucified"
Luke 23. (Lesson Luke 23:33 to 46, inclusive).

We are approaching the close of this "Devine Drama." We were with Jesus in the Garden; we witnessed his arrest; we went with him to the sanhedrin; then the painful act of Peter's denial; the blindfolding; the striking his face; being spit upon; the buffeting and the mockery.

It is the break of day. The multitude led him to Pontius Pilate, after the Sanhedrin had found him guilty of blasphemy, because Jesus declared himself the Son of God, which was punishable by death. This charge did not concern any civil court; so they bring a three-fold accusation against him, which the court must investigate: (a) perverting the nation; (b) forbidding paying tribute to Caesar, and (c) claiming to be a king. Only Luke brings us this information. These charges differ from those before the sanhedrin. There they were: (1) Jesus would destroy the temple and rebuild it in three days; (2) the claim that he was the promised Messiah—the Son of God. On these charges he was found guilty and condemned to death (But the Jews had no power over life or death, hence they go to Pilate's court).

Pilate, an illegitimately born child of the family of Pontius in Spain, about 4 B. C., had much trouble with the Jews, because he tried to put images of Caesar in the temple. (Against this sacrilege the Jews appealed to Rome, and were sustained). Pilate knew the Jews, knew that they envied Jesus because the masses believed in and followed him.

The trial before Pilate was a farce. Pilate in the four Gospels asks eight different questions of Jesus and six different questions of the Jews. Pilate declared Jesus innocent—not guilty. We omit the trial before King Herod—the murdered of John the Baptist.

At last Pilate grants the Jews' request to have Jesus crucified. They had called his blood upon them, which curse came forty years later. Jesus is turned over to his tormentors, he is scourged by them, crowned with thorns, mocked, spit upon and finally led away to Golgotha.

An act of mercy was shown Jesus on the way, the placing of his cross upon Simon of Cyrene; not that Jesus was unable to carry it, as some try to make us believe. (He was able, without human aid, to carry out the redemptive work.)

At last, he is nailed to the cross. Don't you feel the hammer blows? "The hand that was nailed to the cross of woe, In love reaches down to the world below;

DEPARTS FOR COLORADO

From Wednesday's Daily
This morning S. S. Gooding departed for Brush, Colorado, where he will spend a short time visiting with relatives and old friends in that vicinity, later going to Chappel, Nebraska, where he has relatives. He will look over the condition of the crops while in the west and enjoy a general outing.

VISIT AT NEBRASKA CITY

From Wednesday's Daily
L. S. Devoe, superintendent of the city schools, with Frank A. Cloldt, departed this morning for Nebraska City where they were guests at the noonday luncheon of the Rotary club of that city. Mr. Devoe was the guest speaker on "Vocational Education" while Mr. Cloldt was heard in a vocal solo.

WILL ACT ON COMMITTEE

Rev. V. C. Wright, pastor of the First Methodist church, departed this morning for Lincoln where he will spend the week. Rev. Wright is a member of the examining committee of the divinity school of the Wesleyan university. He will assist in the final tests of the candidates for the ministry.

Murray

Earl Merritt has purchased a new Pontiac car from L. D. Crosser, the Murray distributor.

Dr. and Mrs. R. W. Tyson and little daughter were guests last Sunday at the home of his parents in Elmwood.

J. D. Kelsey and wife, of Shenandoah were here last week to attend the funeral of Mrs. Henry C. Long, which was held Friday afternoon.

The new floor covering is now in place in Dr. R. W. Tyson's newly redecorated office, making it most attractive and the equal of any large city office.

Mrs. Bertha Shrader, daughter of Mrs. Henry C. Long, was here during the last illness of the mother and aided her sister, Mrs. George Nickles, in the care of the mother.

Chester Shrader and wife, of Omaha, who were here during the illness of his grandmother, Mrs. Henry C. Long, remained for the funeral, which was held Friday afternoon.

The Nehawka kittenball team was in Murray Sunday afternoon for a game with the Murray team. The game was one sided and resulted in a victory for Murray by the score of 13 to 0.

Earl Merritt, who has been painting the Presbyterian parsonage preparatory to the return of Rev. E. G. Sloan and his new wife the latter part of this week, has the work about completed.

Earl Lancaster was in Omaha with some twenty head of fat cattle he had been feeding during the spring and summer. The cattle were delivered to the market by Frank Mrasek, who was accompanied by Earl.

W. F. Evers, superintendent of the Nebraska Masonic Home at Plattsmouth, was a visitor in Murray last Monday, looking after some business matters here and visiting his friends, George Nickles and Tom Nelson.

Mr. and Mrs. Chester Sporer entertained for dinner last Sunday at their home, William Sporer, father of Chester, as well as Charles Sporer, a brother, and Mrs. Ironson, housekeeper at the Sporer home in Murray.

Mrs. V. E. Perry and daughter of Brule were visiting with Grandmother Catherine Perry last Sunday. They will also visit at Elmwood before returning to their home in the western part of the state the latter part of this week.

Charles Leydig, now residing in Murray planned to go to his home at Glade, Kansas, when he received word that his wife had given birth to a 7-pound baby boy and that all were getting along nicely, so postponed his trip for the present.

L. M. Hauptmann, superintendent of the Alvo schools, and wife, stopped in Murray for a visit at the home of Mrs. Hauptmann's sister, Mrs. G. E. Brubacher and family, while en route home from Iowa City, where they had been spending a week on business.

The Murray kittenball team was at Plattsmouth Monday night for a game under the floodlights. Their opponents were Donat's Fallstuffs, one of the teams in the Plattsmouth kittenball league. The game went to the Plattsmouth team by a score of 29 to 8.

Harrell Bryan, who some time ago joined the CCC and is located in a camp near Sioux City, was a guest of his friend, Van Allen, over the week end, both coming to Murray to spend the day Sunday at the home of the parents of Van and returning to their respective homes Sunday evening.

Elmer Webb was down from Plattsmouth Sunday afternoon to bring a supply of Ak-Sar-Ben tickets to James Smith, director of the Murray-Lewiston band, which accompanied the Cass county delegation to Monday night's den show. Not finding Mr. Smith at home, he left the tickets with a neighbor.

Shed Poles for Sale

No. 1 quality, $1 each; No. 2 at 75c Tom Nelson at lumber yard.

Card of Thanks

We desire to extend our sincere thanks to all who in any way ministered during the last illness of our son and brother, David Lancaster, for the floral offerings and kindly words of the minister and to those who sang at the funeral.—Earl Lancaster and wife, and Raymond; Dan Hoschar and Family; Mr. and Mrs. Malvern Read; Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Noell and Miss Alice Dill.

Program Well Attended

A good crowd was on hand at the Christian church Sunday evening to witness the annual Children's day program which was sponsored by the Ladies Aid society and given by the Bible school students. A neat sum was realized, which, in accordance with past custom, goes for the furtherance of mission work.

To Attend Summer School

Misses Catherine Long and Mildred Wilson, the latter a graduate from the Plattsmouth high school this year, went to Peru Sunday, where they have entered summer school at the state teachers' college. Miss Long is one of the teachers in the Murray schools, but Miss Wilson has no school as yet, although she is endeavoring to secure one for the coming year.

Attending Summer School

Miss Lola Davis, one of the teachers of the Murray schools, on Tuesday of this week went to Lincoln, where she entered summer school at the University of Nebraska seeking to better prepare herself for her duties as a teacher. While she is one of the very finest of teachers, popular alike with both pupils and patrons, she is always attempting to better equip herself to carry on in the teaching profession.

Proved a Great Success

The Daily Vacation Bible School, which was held this year under the joint sponsorship of the Presbyterian and Christian churches, was a decided success, with a large enrollment and much interest shown in the work. Miss Lola Davis of the Presbyterian Sunday school and Mrs. Loyd Shubert, wife of the pastor of the Christian church, were in charge and proved themselves very adept teachers, with much of the credit for the fine success made of the undertaking due to their efforts.

Visited in Murray Sunday

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Waggoner, of Diller, where they are engaged in the hardware business, while on their way to Omaha stopped in Murray last Sunday and visited for a portion of the day with their old time friend, Thomas Nelson. They are the owners of the hardware store which was owned by Mr. Nelson some 31 years ago and was sold by him to the Waggoners in 1905.

First Free Picture Show

The first free picture show of the current season in Murray, was held last Saturday night and was enjoyed by a large audience of townspeople and folks from the surrounding countryside. The free movies are to be an entertainment feature here throughout the summer on Saturday nights, the same as for the past several years.

Mrs. W. G. Boedeker Poorly

Mrs. W. G. Boedeker, who has been in poor health for some time, was taken to Omaha Monday by the husband, entering the Methodist hospital there for observation and treatment. Her friends are all hoping she may be able to return home in a short time, well and strong again.

Worshipped Together

Prior to the departure of the Rev. Sloan, pastor of the local Presbyterian church for the east, where he was to be married the fore part of this week, arrangements were made with Rev. Loyd Shubert, pastor of the Christian church, for the congregation of the Presbyterian church to worship with the members of the Christian church, which they did and which we think is a very fine custom. Another example of the fine harmony prevailing is shown in the Daily Vacation Bible school, which sessions were divided equally between the two churches.

Lost Movement of Watch

Miss Mildred Allen, who was working in the Norfolk packing plant at Plattsmouth during the recent rush of work there and who was wearing her wrist watch while at work, had the misfortune to lose the works out of the case in some manner. The loss was discovered as only the case and crystal remained on her arm, and although diligent search was made, the missing works could not be found. She made $1.50 for her work and was out some $15 on the lost watch, which was far from being a profitable experience.

Attended Ak-Sar-Ben Show

James Smith and a large number of the members of his new Murray-Lewiston band, which has been rehearsing for some time, accompanied the large Cass county delegation to the Ak-Sar-Ben den show in Omaha Monday night and entertained the crowd as they gathered in the large Ak-Sar-Ben coliseum, from 7:15 to eight, when the main show started. Mr. Smith has the band performing most creditably and their numbers received much applause, especially one or two of the specialty numbers. Cass county night is always a big night at Ak-Sar-Ben den shows, and this year was certainly no exception, with the demand for tickets greater than ever before.

Home from the South

Mrs. Dove Acche, who has been in the south, returned last week and Mr. and Mrs. Earl Merritt went over to the Acche home last Sunday to spend the day and enjoy a very fine dinner. They talked much about the trip of Mrs. Acche to the south, as she had been a guest at the home of relatives of Mr. Merritt while there, the same place at which Mr. and Mrs. Merritt had visited last summer, in Memphis, Tennessee.

Mrs. Acche brought two souvenirs for Mr. and Mrs. Merritt, sent to them by relatives in the south.

Enjoy Family Dinner Today.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Schlichtemeier are entertaining the children and their families at the home on the farm. Mrs. May Cook of West Bend,

Iowa, arrived last week and has been visiting with the parents since, Paul Schlichtemeier and family of Scotts Bluff with the recent addition to the family of two twin boy babies, an outstanding feature, Ronald Schlichtemeier, wife and son of Elmwood, which completed the family circle, made a happy family gathering to surround the dinner table at the home on the farm this noon day.

Card of Thanks.

We desire to express our sincere thanks to our friends and those of our dear mother, Mrs. H. C. Long, for every kindness extended during the recent illness and her passing, for the floral offerings, to the minister who spoke comforting words, those who sang at the funeral.—Mr. and Mrs. Geo. E. Nickles, Mrs. Bertha Shrader, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Shrader, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Kelsey.

Persistence is what counts most in advertising.

Lack of Purpose in Life Chief Criticism Against Younger Generation of Today

Majority of Young Women Find Degree Small Help in Obtaining Job; Marriage Is Still Favored Feminine "Career"

Some representative modern young women

A modern bride

(Editor's Note: This is the fourth and last of a series of four articles on the modern young woman, her philosophy and future prospects).

By MAURICE MERRYFIELD,
International Illustrated News
Feature Writer

New York—What was heralded a few years ago as a "new deal" for women, an emancipation of the sex, has proved to be little more than a shuffle of the old deck with the cards still stacked.

Interviews with a school teacher, private secretary, librarian, clerk, stenographer, nurse, lawyer and chorus girl brought forth a universal agreement from each that she was dissatisfied with her job.

And only one of these, a young lady with ambitions to be a singer, was actually trying to better herself in any way.

Their complaint against their lot in the world of wage earners was based on two counts. Several, including the clerk, teacher, stenographer and librarian, had had their jobs "thrust upon them." At least, they had taken positions which had been somewhat incompatible even at first, but which were the only openings available.

Several had been able to break into their preferred field, only to find their sex an obstacle in competing against men in business, law or medicine.

Their various stories all tended to support the conclusion that women today have but slight chance to become a success in business or the professions, notwithstanding a few notable exceptions. Our economic system, and the depression, account for most of the obstacles which confront them.

College Degree Little Help

Possibly an even greater handicap is the attitude of the young woman herself, as illustrated by the viewpoint of a social worker who was interested in her job, liked her work and was sufficiently interested to study for further advancement.

"But do you intend to carry on indefinitely?"

"Of course not," she laughed. "I intend to get married in time."

In this avowal lies the key to why women, in one sense, are their own worst enemies when it comes to carrying out a career. Most of them look on their job as a mere interlude and do not apply themselves with the interest and industry necessary to success in a highly competitive field.

Three of those interviewed, all college graduates, had found that their degree was of little help in obtaining a job, and had been forced to take a course in business school to qualify for jobs as typists or secretaries.

Only one of this group, a librarian who had ambitions to become a concert singer, thought that a career was a sufficient substitute for marriage. Most of them were of the opinion that social welfare work held the greatest possibilities for women today.

"I believe young women today have a different attitude than did those of the twenties," commented the private secretary of a Cleveland advertiser. There was much talk then of the 'new freedom' and the 'single standard.' While it is true that we are freer today, there isn't so much talk about careers and such. The feminist movement isn't as strong as it was ten years ago, and the young woman today is keener about having a home and children than trying to buck the depression."

Modern Youth Lacks Purpose

"What do you think is the principal criticism to be made of your sex and generation," the proprietor of a Chicago interior decorating shop was asked.

"The lack of purpose in the existence of most young women today," she answered. "They lead rather aimless lives, follow no particular pattern, live, for the most part, from day to day, and allow their youth to be taken up with insignificant matters. Frankly, I don't know a girl of my acquaintance who is accomplishing very much, or appears likely to do so."

For numerous reasons, then, the unattached young woman of today seems rather a forlorn figure, whether she admits it or not.

The modern economic system and the depression have combined to pile up overwhelming odds against the chances of her becoming a "career woman" in any adequate sense of the phrase.

She has been forced to accept jobs, which, if not actually distasteful, offer little chance for advancement or self-satisfaction. Many of them have been forced to sacrifice a considerable share of their earnings to help their families.

"Joy of Living" Lost Art!
Not only do they fail to really enjoy life, they have, in many cases, lost their capacity for living. They have drifted into casual habits, allowed their ambitions and ideals to die a slow death, and, too often settled into a rut of resigned acceptance.

Two factors have lessened their chances of marrying to advantage. The ambitious youth finds his energies and financial reserve taxed by the depression and inadequate to meet the responsibility of a home. The young man of today is also selfish in the respect that he prizes his independence and freedom to a greater extent than ever before, and prefers to live a bachelor instead of economizing as a husband.

In a sense, the lot of the unattached young woman between the ages of 26 and 32 is worse than that of her mother when she was a girl. The young woman of today glimpses life on a wider horizon, has had pointed out to her more distant lands, but her desires have not been correspondingly matched by an increased ability or determination to realize them.
