Cass County Farm Bureau Notes

Many Farmers Treating Bindweed Now.

The ever growing menace to farm land of the European Bindweed, alias "Creeping Charlie," "Creeping Jennie," or "Small Flowered Morning Glory," has drawn the attention of many farmers in the county this spring.

This small, green, spade-shaped creeping vine was in full bloom the past week. The flowers are very similar to that of the regular morning glory but smaller. Most of them are white but some have a pinkish cast.

Although September and October is the ideal time of year to kill them with chemical, a fairly good job can be done now and then another light treatment this fall may do the job 100 per cent. Where the patches are small, treatment with sodium chlorate seems to be the easiest way of eradicating them. Where the area is large, summer cultivation, if done judiciously, is the most economical method. If you have a weed you suspicion to be bindweed bring or send it to the Farm Bureau office for identification and control methods.

Hopper Infestation Worse With Dry Weather.

With grasshopper infestation becoming more serious in eastern Nebraska and locally in the western part of the county in recent days, Cass county farmers are urged to take all precautionary measures in controlling the pest if it becomes too numerous. The old slogan, "A stitch in time, saves nine," applies as the time to control the hoppers is when they are young.

That the infestation is not to be taken lightly was foreseen this week in a statement made by O. S. Bare, extension entomologist at the Nebraska college of agriculture. "Hopper infestation," he said, "is increasing steadily. More than 30 counties have reported grasshoppers in enough numbers to require organized control measures. Unless plenty of moisture is received, heavier damage from the pests is to be expected." In many cases the hoppers are still in the pastures and fence rows and have not spread to the major crops. They should be watched carefully—as the feed gets short they will begin to migrate.

Government hopper poison is not available for the asking as has been stated in some papers. There were a few carloads left in scattered places about the state from two years ago. Perhaps the nearest was 200 miles from here and the trucking and handling would amount to at least 75¢ per cwt. Farmers had better mix their own bait and get the job done in time.

Nebraska Women Honored at Triennial Conference.

Nebraska farm women played a big part in the Country Women of the World conference held in Washington last week which was attended by 7000 rural delegates from 40 nations in the world. Honor was bestowed upon Mrs. Ernest Overton, Otoe county, when she was elected vice-president of the national country women's organization.

The eastern Nebraska woman is past president of the home economics section of Organized Agriculture. Mrs. E. E. Hartz, Lancaster county, was honored also when she was one of the American women presented to Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt with the foreign delegates.

Throughout the week, the Nebraska delegation of 130 women joined with others in discussing commercial homemaker problems. In addition they enjoyed tours to various points of interest in Washington. These included a trip to Mount Vernon and Arlington cemetery.

Representing Cass county women at the conference were: Mrs. Everett Spangler, Murray; Miss Evelyn Wolph, Nehawka; Miss Jessie H. Baldwin, Weeping Water; Mrs. Howard Capwell, Elmwood; Mrs. Geo. Nickel, Alvo. Mrs. Carl Grosshans, from Sarpy county accompanied the first three named ladies.

Agronomy Field Day June 23.

Nebraska's annual agronomy field day will be held at the College of Agriculture in Lincoln on Tuesday, June 23. The 1936 program is tentatively outlined, will feature inspection of recently established grass nurseries and experimental plots of small grain on the agronomy farm. A. L. Frolik of the agronomy department will have charge of the tour.

Everything from weeds to hybrid corn will be discussed during the day. Those scheduled to speak are Dr. F. D. Keim, Elvin F. Frolik, H. E. Engstrom, K. S. Quisenberry, and

D. L. Gross. Particular attention will be paid to the 1936 Nebraska hybrid corn program and cropping practices to conserve soil fertility and moisture.

The Effect of Fly Sprays on Dairy Cows.

In the January number of the Journal Dairy Science, W. M. Regan and S. D. Freeborn, of the California Agricultural Experiment station, gave a very interesting report on studies that have been carried on during the past ten years at the California station on the effects of flies and fly sprays on the dairy cow. These investigators found that:

(1) The loss in milk production caused by flies is often over-estimated. When high producing cows were exposed to extremely heavy infestations, the loss occasioned by house flies and horn flies were negligible. The loss caused by stable flies was slightly less than 10 percent.

(2) When petroleum sprays were used to repel the stable flies, the loss in milk yield was increased to 22 percent. The extreme effect was evident when the high producing cows were sprayed during hot weather. Not only was production diminished, but the body temperatures and respiration rates were elevated. The application of oil prevents the evaporation of water from the skin.

(3) A water emulsion of pyrethrum and pine oil combined with a small amount of petroleum equalled or excelled the better brands of commercial petroleum fly sprays in fly repelling efficiency. The two best emulsions used have the following formulas:

FORMULA 1

Petroleum oil, 84cc. (Unslipitated residue, 90; Viscosity, 97).
Pyrethrum extract (19-1) 45cc.
Pine Oil, steam distilled, 45cc.
(Specific gravity, .9377; Boiling point 194-217; Color, 1 NPA).
Triethanolamine oleate 16 gms.
Water 100cc.
Dilute one part of this stock emulsion with four and one-third parts of water.

FORMULA 2

Petroleum oil (as above) 50cc.
Pine oil (as above) 50cc.
Pyrethrum extract (as above) 50cc.
Diglycol oleate, 28.5cc.
Dilute slowly with eight parts of water, agitating vigorously.

This research at the California station confirms the investigation that was made recently in the Iowa State College station and also a very early test made by Dr. C. H. Eckles, at the Missouri station in 1905. He concluded at this early date, that the use of a fly repellent was fairly effective in preventing annoyance from flies if applied at milking time, but the yield of milk or fat was not affected by its use.

This would indicate that a heavy spraying with many so called good fly sprays is more harmful to the cows than a light spraying or no spraying at all.

W. C. T. U. MEETING

The W. C. T. U. met on Monday afternoon at the attractive country home of Mrs. S. A. Wiles south of the city and with a very pleasing number of the ladies in attendance.

The meeting was presided over by Mrs. Pearl Mann in the absence of the president, Mrs. E. H. Wescott, who is visiting in the east. The devotions were by Mrs. J. E. Wiles.

The roll call was responded to by scripture quotations. The annual flower mission was held as a part of the observances of the day and the ladies are now engaged in the distribution of the floral remembrances to the sick and shut-ins over the city.

Mrs. R. B. Hayes gave a very interesting talk on the five point program of the W. C. T. U. for the ensuing year and also reviewed the recent conference in Lincoln held by the temperance organizations.

The ladies were delighted to have with them their county president, Mrs. Elmer Sundstrom, who is now a resident of Plattsmouth, she receiving a hearty welcome from the ladies.

Mrs. Mann also reviewed the "Union Signal," official paper of the society.

The afternoon was closed with the serving of refreshments by the hostesses to add to the pleasures of the members of the party.

RESOLUTION OF RESPECT

Copy of a resolution passed at the regular meeting of the Vestry of St. Luke's church on June 8th, 1936:

"Whereas, it has pleased God to take from us our faithful and beloved Senior Warden, R. W. Clement, on the 14th day of May, 1936; and whereas, the Vestry knows truly that in the dissolution of this valuable member, the church shall mourn his devout association, and, that the bereaved wife and daughters, for whom we entertain an abiding regard, have lost a devoted husband and father, alike noble in excellencies of character and person; a man possessing an innate fondness for home; an intense loyalty to friends, and to his chosen work; and

"Whereas, the uncompensating illness suffered by our warden was a year of anxiety to the family; Therefore be it resolved: That this vestry, as one individual, esteems it a sorrowful privilege to convey to the saddened wife and daughters the assurance of its unfeigned sympathy and offer such consolation as the halcyon memory of his life can afford.

"May his soul find sweet employment in the spacious fields of Eternity.

"Be it further resolved: That these resolutions be entered in our book of minutes and that the Evening Journal be requested to publish them and furthermore that a copy be sent to Mrs. Clement and family." Carried unanimously.
