Temperatures Soar as Crops, People Suffer

Friday Sees 107 and Temperature for Night Remains Over 90 to Cause Great Suffering.

One of the most severe heat spells of the summer swept over the middle west Friday to cause heavier loss to the rapidly wasting crops and bringing untold suffering to the residents of all parts of the state. Grand Island with 117 degrees was within one degree of the all time record in that part of the state.

In this city and nearby territory the mercury rose to 107 and Friday night registered one of the hottest nights in the memory of the oldest inhabitant of this part of the west. At midnight the thermometer stood at 98 degrees and at no time during the night or early morning fell below the 90 mark. At 8 o'clock the mercury had risen to 101 and at noon had mounted to 108 and still climbing.

Accompanying the intense heat of Friday was the hot and burning winds that kept their force well into the night and made rest an impossibility under the most favorable circumstances.

Very little hope of relief is felt for this part of the west that has suffered from almost a month of the heat that has been practically over the 100 mark every day.

FUNERAL OF FRANK BUTTERTY

From Saturday's Daily: The funeral service for Frank F. Butterty, 8th auto accident victim in Omaha in 1936, was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Brailey & Dorrance mortuary in that city. The services were largely attended by the friends in Omaha and a number from this city, as well as the members of the family circle.

The Rev. D. J. Gallagher, rector of the St. Andrew's Episcopal church, celebrated the impressive funeral service of the church and also at the grave in Oak Hill cemetery in this city. The pall bearers were six nephews of the deceased, John, Joseph and Harley Butterty, of Lincoln, Ernest and Joseph Butterty and Stanley Nejedley of Omaha.

There was a large group of the old friends from this city present at the Oak Hill cemetery where a short service was held this afternoon.

CALLED TO OHIO DUE TO ILLNESS OF HIS SISTER

Stores Feed a Year -- and Then Forgets It

E. J. Wetenkamp, Lancaster Farmer, Thus Makes Sure of Supply for Next Season.

E. J. Wetenkamp, Lancaster farmer a few miles east of Lincoln, has found one way to avert a serious immediate feed shortage. He stores feed ahead one year and then forgets about it.

Feed conservation by means of the trench silo is at least temporarily beating the drought for this farmer, as it is for thousands of others over the state. Right now he has a 100 ton trench filled with palatable livestock feed which his 60 head of dairy animals and others will relish. He put the feed in last year and forgot about it.

The silo has remained unopened until this week. An upright, with a capacity of about 120 tons, was filled last year. Now it is about empty. Pastures are gone. There will probably be no more alfalfa this year. The silage will come to the rescue.

It took from 35 to 40 acres to fill the silo last year. The corn contained but little grain, but is expected to make excellent feed for the animals. So short was the born that it was cut with a binder, then run thru an ensilage cutter and put into the trench.

Wetenkamp believes in silage as a livestock feed. He has used it for years. Uprights are better in some respects than trenches but in case of emergency, the latter can be constructed rapidly and cheaply, he says. By use of a Fresno, a team of horses and one man and a boy this trench was built in 1934 at an estimated cost of $12 to $16. Today it holds 100 tons of choice ensilage. Last fall Wetenkamp was offered $4 a ton for the feed. Today he is happy that he did not sell.

BUDWEISERS WIN FROM CARDS

Last evening the Budweisers turned back the Cardinals in the local kitty ball league by a score of 12 to 7 before a large crowd of perspiring heat infested fans at Athletic park.

The Buds opened in the first frame with a bid for victory when Gib Hirz, leadoff man, was safe on an error and scored on the double of McCarthy, who also registered when Rolfe hit safe.

The big inning of the Buds was in the second when they massed half of their total scores in a six run rally, largely due to errors with a double by Brittain and singles by Newman and Rolfe to help out.

The Cardinals had their big moment in the fourth inning when they massed four runs on the Buds, these all being through the hit and run method and with home runs by Heim and Davis, a double by Speck, singles by J. Kaffenberger, E. Meisinger, and Lohnes.

ALMOST BAD ACCIDENT

On Tuesday morning Norval Bothwell was fixing the awning at the front of his store and was using a large sledge hammer to drive a nail. His attention was called to something else and he got down off the step ladder, leaving the sledge hammer laying on top of the ladder. Just as he landed on the sidewalk he received a terrific thump on the head that staggered him and presently the blood came down all over his face. The hammer had fallen down from the ladder striking him on the head with the above result. It was a minute or two before he realized just what had happened. Earl Horton happened to be standing close and explained what had happened. Norval will have a sore head for a few days, but he will be careful where he lays the hammer the next time.—Elmwood Leader-Echo.

Mr. Bothwell is one of the leading merchants of Elmwood and well known over the county and his friends will regret to learn of his accident. He is a brother-in-law of County Treasurer John E. Turner.

Bigger and Better Than Ever

Average Height of Movie Stars Only Slightly More Than Five Ft.

Loretta Young, Height Five Feet Three Inches, Weight 105 Pounds, Considered Ideal Build for Role of Featured Player

Loretta Young

Gloria Stuart

Alice Faye

Rochelle Hudson

Hollywood—The odds are distinctly against tall stately women succeeding as actresses in Hollywood, judging by a recent survey of heights and weights of leading screen stars. Not only is this true, but it seems that smaller women are favored for featured roles while their sisters in the chorus are usually a bit taller and a bit heavier.

There doesn't seem to be any definite reason for the petite and diminutive type standing a better chance of celluloid success. One factor which may contribute to the situation is the general smallness of the male stars. The numerous leading men are who are five feet six inches or less make it necessary to cast them with leading ladies who are one or two inches shorter.

It is also true that a chornie shows to better advantage if she is about five and a half feet tall, that height lending itself to grace and poise in semi-ballet dances and routines of similar nature.

Camera Adds oundage
Fifty chorus girls in the cast of one current musical averaged five feet five and one half inches in height and 118 pounds in weight. The average holds for most of those who sing and dance "in the line" of Hollywood musical shows.

Chorus girls range in height from five feet two inches and 109 pounds to five feet seven inches and 126 pounds.

One reason why the young ladies of somewhat larger proportions are less likely to succeed is because of the tendency of the camera to exaggerate size. Even the most willowy of feminine stars take on a few pounds under the Klieg lights.

On the other hand, one of the tallest stars is Gloria Stuart who stands five feet six inches and weights 125 pounds. At the other end of the scale is piquant Dixie Dunbar who weighs only 98 pounds and is under five feet in height.

Garbo One of Tallest
Greta Garbo is one of the taller film celebrities and Joan Crawford ranks among "the higherups" who play featured roles. Carole Lombard is another who towers above the average. For such "grownups" it is necessary to recruit a leading man of the height of Gary Cooper, Fred MacMurray or Clark Gable.

Loretta Young is one of those who comes closest to the average height and weight of the stars. She is five feet three inches tall and tips the scales at 105 pounds.

Other statistics gleaned from Hollywood lots list the following weights and measures:

Alice Faye, height five feet five inches, weight 112 pounds; Janet Gaynor, five feet, weight 112 pounds; Rochelle Hudson, five feet four inches, 100 pounds; Arlene Judge, five feet, 99 pounds; June Lang, five feet three inches, 104 pounds, and Claire Trevor, five feet three inches, 114 pounds.
