Promise of Fair Corn Crop

Henry, John, Elbert and Raymond Koester, of Cisney Park, Illinois, cousins of Alber Koester, who was married last Wednesday at the North Branch church, arrived in Avoca last Tuesday, having driven all the way from their home town in the one day. They report conditions dry in Illinois, but say there will be a fair yield of corn. That planted on spring plowed land will yield about 25 bushels to the acre, while corn raised on fall plowed land is expected to make close to forty bushels. Certainly a lot better than here, where the corn stalks are being cut into ensilage.

Many Digging Pit Silos

The matter of preserving all the feed there is for winter use is receiving the careful attention of the farmers, who have resorted to the digging of inexpensive pit silos for the storing of their feed supply. The pit silo came into quite general use in Nebraska during the drought of two years ago, and was found most satisfactory. This year hundreds of them are being dug all over the state.

Not So Hot a Year Ago

Ruge recalled that Mrs. Emma Rawalt began her school west of Avoca a week early last year, and en route home from the opening day stopped to get some groceries, while he had an oil stove going behind the counter to keep the place comfortable. Certainly a lot different than now.

Hiner, who relieved him allowed but four hits, but numerous walks, followed by timely hits accounted for the runs.

All locals played a fine game, fielding and batting well, especially L. Hiskett who hit safely four times out of five.

He report "Hokey" as getting along fine in his position as manager of the water plant at Kankakee, and declares he has the best lawn he saw anywhere between here and Michigan. Hard Summer Heat Leaves but Little of Gardens

Better Yards and Gardens Contest Finds But Little Material on Which to Base Judging.

Drought, grasshoppers, and day after day of scorching heat have nearly destroyed some of the spring's most promising yards and gardens. The Yard and Garden Contest has become a battle against the elements. Rather than attempt the raising of rare and delicate plants, a struggle has been made to keep only the most hardy alive.

Two judgments have been made thus far. The third is scheduled for September. This rating will terminate the contest. Judges will probably be selected from out of town. Rev. G. A. Pahl, Jr., chairman, announces that prizes will be awarded and the winner will enter the national contest during next month.

Many surprises and difficulties may face the judges in determining the winners. Some of the most attractive gardens and lawns in the city were the first to shrivel under the heat wave.

At the beginning of the summer there were 150 contestants. The city was divided into five wards and a chairman appointed for each ward.
