Cass County Has Grand Champion Baby Beef.

Cleo Bergman, Eagle, member of the Junior Feeders Baby Beef club is the proud owner of the Grand Champion baby beef at the Nebraska State Fair. His calf, "March On Pioneer," sold for 70c per pound in the 4-H sale ring Friday and netted him around $690. The Paxton Hotel of Omaha paid this price, which is the highest ever paid for a State Fair champion beef. The Paxton also purchased winning calves at the State Fair auction last year as well as Ak-Sar-Ben. Before winning the grand championship, "March On Pioneer" took first in the D group of Herefords, then champion of all Herefords and finally grand champion of about 400 calves of all breeds.

In the baby beef showmanship contest, Myrl Kunz of Elmwood was declared champion and Clyde Althouse of Eagle, reserve champion. The county group of Herefords placed first and the same group of five Herefords were declared grand champion over all breeds. Included in the group were the following boys' calves, with their individual placings: John Schafer, 4th; Oscar Brandt, 14th; Raymond Brandt, Alvin Weyers, 15th; and Clyde Althouse, 4th.

The county group of Galloways placed 3rd in the Angus and Galloway class. This group was composed of the following boys' calves: James Schafer, 1st; Myrl Kunz, 2nd; Oscar Brandt, 3rd; Robert Pollard, 4th; and Arthur Pollard, 5th. Other Galloway placings were: Merritt Pollard, 6th and 9th; John Wolph 10th and Malcolm Pollard, 11th. Harlan Kunz exhibited the 4th place Hereford in Class D, and Loren Frohlich, 16th place in the same class. In the Hereford heifer class, Arthur Pollard's calf placed 10th and Warren Rikl's 15th.

Cass county took 7th placing on swine herdsman ship.

84 individuals competed in livestock judging. Cass county's team won the contest, with Oscar Brandt 5th high individual and Robert Pollard 6th high. This team will represent Nebraska at the Chicago International in November.

Bertha Horner, Nehawka, who with Frances House composed the canning judging team from Cass county which placed 7th as a team, was sixth high individual in this contest. Hazel Drennan placed fifth in the meat identification contest.

Cass county's 4-H club song group placed 3rd in the state contest in which 17 counties competed. Ruth Ann Sheldon won first place and a gold medal, in the song identification contest.

4-H club members from Cass county also brought home many ribbons on poultry. Clyde Althouse won 1st on pen of turkey chicks and 2nd on turkey cockerel. His sister Inez, won 1st on turkey cockerel and 2nd on pen of chicks. Robert Wall won 1st on a special class of 25 production pullets, 1st on Leghorn pullet, 1st on Leghorn pen, and 2nd Leghorn cockerel.

If You Would Be Smart Change Your Hair Style.

Changing your style of hair dress is as important in giving you that "new-season" feeling as is a new dress or new costume complete. New ideas on hair fixing can refresh you and your wardrobe at any time of year. Why not try one of the new off-the-face styles to give you that cool, fresh feeling so necessary when one first dons dark autumn things. For instance, this new way of brushing the hair up off the face makes you feel cooler, younger and smarter all at once. You part your hair at side or center... make a circular part around the crown of your head, then curl this next-to-the-face section up, back and under, so's there's a halo around your head. For the older woman or you who don't want to cut your hair short on top, brush it over to the sides and start the halo further from the part. The general idea, however, is to get a brushed-up-and-away from the face look. It's cool and easy to manage and will be ultra-smart this season.

English women sew wide meshed hair nets to black velvet ribbons and tie them around back of the ears so the back part of their hair is kept in perfect curl while the front part is soft around the face. Grand for sports or riding in an open car.

Sorghums Get Test.

Are sorghums "drouth insurance" crops? That's the test which these crops are undergoing this year. They are having their chance to prove whether or not they deserve such a title.

Demonstrational plantings thruout the state were made last spring to evaluate the various varieties. At the Nebraska Experiment Station the season has been so dry and hot that sorghums have been greatly retarded in growth. Many of the tall-growing varieties are only two to three feet high now.

The outstanding variety at the Station is Cheyenne. This is an early sweet-stalk variety grown chiefly for forage. Day Milo, a short combine type, looks second best now. Medium and late maturing types at present show no heads.

Atlas sorgo, popularly known, will in most fields hardly head out. In total forage produced through it will probably rank at the top as in past seasons. Atlas seed will probably be extremely scarce next spring.

Sorghums in general, due to unfavorable climatic conditions, have probably developed more prussic acid than is commonly the case. Care should be taken, while pastures are short and livestock more or less hungry, to see that they do not get into sorghum fields. This is likely to result in serious loss of livestock. Even though sorghum crops may be unusually likely to contain prussic acid this season, such crops when properly cured may be fed with reasonable safety. If made into silage the chances of poisoning appearing is slight. Where well cured and fed as fodder, there is very little danger of poisoning although it does occasionally happen.

Sauces Add Variety to Meal.

Good sauces are one of the important accomplishments of a cook. They make for variety and often for economy. An inexpensive bland sauce, such as white sauce or milk gravy, serves to "extend" the flavor of the more expensive foods with which it is served. For fresh peas, beans, okra, spinach, kale or any of the greens, many people think melted butter, bacon fat or other meat drippings, with salt, pepper, and in some cases lemon juice or vinegar, are seasoning enough. But a favorite way to serve new potatoes, cabbage, carrots, and onions is to "cream" them in white sauce. Harvard beets have a tempting sweet-sour sauce. Meats have their gravies, puddings and cakes their sweet sauces.

There are three families of sauces—those thickened with starch in some form, those thickened with eggs, and those not thickened at all. In each family there are many variations. And there are some sauces that seem to belong to no family at all. The white sauce, and its variations form the most numerous group, and is the most familiar to cooks. This group uses corn starch or flour as thickening.

The hollandaise sauces and the custards are thickened with eggs. True hollandaise is made of butter, egg yolks, lemon juice, and a little boiling water. The Bureau of Home Economics suggests 1/2 cup butter, 4 egg yolks, 2 tablespoons of lemon juice, 1/4 cup of boiling water, 1/4 teaspoon salt, and a dash of cayenne. The directions for making are: Divide the butter into three portions. Beat the egg yolks and lemon juice together, add one piece of butter, and cook in a double boiler, stirring constantly until the mixture begins to thicken. Remove from the fire, add a second piece of butter, and stir rapidly. Then add the remaining butter, and continue to stir until the mixture is completely blended. Add the salt, cayenne, and boiling water. Return to the double boiler, and stir until the sauce thickens.

Hollandaise becomes Bernaise sauce when chopped fresh tarragon and parsley are added, or when tarragon vinegar is substituted for the lemon juice. And it is called anchovy butter when chopped anchovies are added. Flavoring with grated horseradish makes another tempting hollandaise. Mock hollandaise, as would be expected, is cheaper than hollandaise. It is thickened with flour and egg, instead of egg yolks only. It is, in fact, a very rich white sauce containing eggs and flavored with lemon juice. Custard sauce, which is a soft custard usually thinner than is served for itself alone, is the typical example of a sauce thickened with eggs. It is used for corn starch or gelatin puddings, or for cakes. To serve with fruit, make the custard thicker by using more eggs.

Hard sauce, an uncooked sauce, which is made of butter and powdered sugar with flavoring as desired, calls for 1 part butter to 3 of sugar. Cream the butter, add sugar gradually and continue beating. The longer the beating, the creamier the sauce. Chill before serving. For variety, substitute brown sugar, and flavor with the grated rind of an orange.

Forest Field Day.

The Nebraska National Forest at Halsey will be host to hundreds of tree planting enthusiasts on Sunday, September 20, when the annual field day is scheduled to be held there. Over some 30,000 acres of timbered sandhills, visitors will be guided to inspect plantings made on the forest. There they will see pines growing luxuriantly out in the hills under field conditions.

No definite program for the day has been received as yet but Cass county people are being invited to go to the forest for an all-day inspection of tree life. New picnic grounds and a swimming pool have been added in the last year to make a visit more pleasant.

With several thousand small seedling Clarke-McNary trees distributed to local farmers each spring, it is believed some of these tree planters will want to see how such trees are grown. All of the Clarke-McNary pines come from the Nebraska National Forest.

AT M. E. CHURCH SUNDAY

Next Sunday evening, Sept. 20th in the Methodist church auditorium, Plattsmouth, Chapter F, of the P. E. O. will present Mr. R. A. Kirkpatrick of the Union Pacific Railroad company in an illustrated lecture upon the subject of our Western National Parks, including Grand Canyon, Bryce Canyon and others. He will use colored slides. The lecture is free and the public is urged to attend. It will be remembered by some that this splendid speaker delivered a lecture in Plattsmouth last autumn, his subject at that time being the Boulder Dam.

MOTOR DEATHS LESS

Nebraska's automobile death toll for 1936 mounted to 193 in the week ending Saturday, Sept. 12, at midnight as 12 more persons lost their lives in traffic accidents. The total for 1935 was 320, said A. L. Stuart, secretary of the Nebraska safety council. Stuart said his record shows that up to Sept. 1 this year the death toll was 127 and for the corresponding period last year 214, making 36 less deaths this year than last year for the same period.

DEMOCRATIC COMMITTEEMEN

There will be a meeting of the Democratic Committeemen in Weeping Water, at 2 p. m., Saturday, September 19. All men and women serving on county or village committees are urged to attend. d&w

WILL SPEAK HERE

Judge Charles L. Graves, who has the direction of the program for the Old Settlers Homecoming of the King Korn Carnival, has received the assurance that Judge Jesse L. Root, of Omaha, would be here for the event. This will be on Friday, September 25th and one of the big days of the fall festival.

Judge Root is one of the old time residents here and in his years in Plattsmouth and Cass county was very prominent in the political and social life of the community. He served as state senator and also county attorney for a number of years, but on entering the services of the Burlington as their solicitor at Omaha, removed to that city.

Judge Root is a frequent visitor in the old home community and always receives a hearty welcome from the host of old time friends.

Paul Iverson Speaks Before the Rotarians

Plattsmouth Young Man Studying for Ministry Gives Views of Modern Day Conditions.

The Plattsmouth Rotary club had a very interesting treat afforded them on Tuesday at the weekly luncheon when Paul Iverson, Plattsmouth young man, now a student at the Union Theological seminary in New York City, was the guest speaker.

Mr. Iverson, who was born and grew up here, is a graduate of the Plattsmouth high school in 1931, later of Hastings college, and is now completing his work in the seminary in the east preparatory to entering the ministry of the Presbyterian church.

Mr. Iverson had as his subject, "What the Young Man Entering the Clergy Faces Today." He very ably discussed the problems of the world that is now in the midst of a great unrest and in which new systems and ideals are being brought to the front. His talk covered the social, economic and religious life of the world, showing his deep study of the various viewpoints of the world happenings today. He pointed to the tragedies that had covered the churches in many of the nations as the result of the churches not making concessions to the trends of the time and the adoption of the modern ideas in the dealing with the problems of the people.

The young minister must find himself in touch with the modern day conditions and with all classes of the people of the world. He also urged that all effort be made to preserve the rights of the nation and people in the changing times that demanded more and broader social and security measures. James G. Maury was the leader of the meeting and presented the speaker.

ATTEND GERMAN DAY

From Monday's Daily
Mr. and Mrs. Louis Dunkak, of Raymond, Nebraska, were here for a short time today while en route home from Omaha. They were in attendance at the German day observance on Sunday at the German home. He reports a very fine time and a very wonderful program of addresses and songs of the Fatherland.

PLEGDED AT UNIVERSITY

Among the pledges announced by the fraternities at the University of Nebraska, there are several Cass county young men listed, among these being Dale Boyles, Alvo, pledged to Delta Upsilon; John Cook, Greenwood, Sigma Nu; Vern Rewalt, Avoca, Sigma Phi Epsilon.

Mummers Parade is Witnessed by a Record Number

Humorous and Fanciful Costumes Noted in the Line of March of Plattsmouth Merrimakers

As the curtain raiser for next week's four days of festivity, the Mummers parade last night drew out some 1,500 to enjoy the offering of the local people in the cause of the King Korn Carnival.

The paraders, who had formed at the American Legion building, moved out on the march promptly at 8 o'clock, the roll of the drums of the American Legion drum and bugle corps announcing the approach of the funmakers.

The parade was headed by Captain H. L. Gayer, king of the 1935 carnival and who was fittingly garbed.

The drum corps boys were arrayed in the comical costumes that characterized almost all of the long line of marchers.

The court house employees created a great deal of attraction as they carried a large American flag in the line of march and illuminated by the red flares that lent a most attractive touch.

The "lady in black" as she strolled along the streets, cigarette aglow, was the center of much curiosity while ye walking bartender caused much "suds" appeal as he tempted the thirsty onlookers.

Superintendent Devoe and his group of NYA workers also formed one of the larger groups noted in the line of march.

Perhaps one of the outstanding offerings was the high school band which furnished the snappy marching music for the second division of the parade and proved a real hit. They were under the direction of Peter Gradoville.

As had been intimated, the democratic donkey was in the parade, altho it was in a mood hard to handle, but the elephant was not on the job as had been expected.

A bicycling duo gave exhibitions of their skill along the line of march to add to the fun and enjoyment of the crowds.

Among the marching hosts was noted Charles Barnard, one of the live wires in the King Korn group and who was on his own in the procession and undisguised.

Clowns added their part to the general fun of the evening and was a treat for the little folks who had gathered to witness the parade.

The announcements were made from the platform as the parade passed, by Mr. Knott of the U. S. forestry camp, who has served so efficiently in this capacity on the last several Wednesday night offerings.

Following the parade the lovers of the old time dancing had a treat as a dance was staged on the platform at Fifth and Main streets and here to the old fashioned music there were several sets danced.

ATTEND OMAHA MEETING

From Wednesday's Daily
This afternoon a group of the local Masons departed for Omaha where they will be guests this evening at the dinner of Omaha Chapter No. 19 of the National Sojourners. This meeting will be in honor of the naval members of this organization of Masonic service men. William Robertson, deputy grand master of the Masons of Nebraska, will speak on the "Constitution Adopted September 17, 1787," while Raymond C. Cook will be heard in a vocal solo, "Toreador" and Frank A. Clodit in the number, "Duna." James M. Robertson, midshipman at Annapolis naval academy, will be presented by Lieutenant Commander Lincoln Humphreys, U. S. N. and will receive the greetings of the service men's organization.
