

MANLEY NEWS

Mrs. A. Steinkamp was spending the past week at the home of her son, Ed Steinkamp, in the country.

Frank H. Stander of Omaha was looking after some business matters in Manley last Wednesday, driving down in the morning and returning home in the evening.

Mr. and Mrs. John Bergman and son, Bobbie, were over near Murray last Sunday, where they attended a family gathering at the home of Mrs. Bergman's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bartos.

Mr. and Mrs. John C. Rauth were in Plattsmouth last Wednesday afternoon and evening, attending the opening day of the Korn Karnival, looking after business matters and visiting friends.

Herman Bergman has been having a lot of grief from a number of boils which persist in attaching themselves to different portions of his anatomy. While no new ones have put in their appearance recently and the infection seems pretty well halted, he is still suffering from the effects of the older ones.

Mesdames Frank Bergman and J. C. Rauth of Manley and Mesdames Joseph Murphy and William Wirth of Weeping Water were in Dunbar one day last week for the meeting of the Catholic church deacons held at that place. Mr. Rauth drove the ladies from Manley over to the neighboring town for the meetings.

Herman Rauth and John Rohrdanz began the harvest of some 15 acres of wild hay Wednesday morning and have not been letting any grass grow under their feet as they feared a return of the clouds after the rain of the fore part of the week. There will be a good crop of hay on the land, but not nearly as heavy as last year, due to the dry weather.

Visit at Springfield. Last Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Fred Fleischman went to Louisville, and were there joined by John Fleischman and wife, and Henry Taylor, father of Mrs. Fred Fleischman, the entire group going to Springfield for a visit at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Taylor, brother and sister-in-law of Mrs. Fred Fleischman. is played up extensively in photos and news stories in the metropolitan papers. All who attended speak in highest terms of the fine entertainment provided and the splendid parades that featured each of the four days.

Made Good Guesses. Walter Muckenaupt was the winner in a guessing contest sponsored by the Nebraska Power company at the Cass county fair, receiving a fine electric stove as the first prize. Edward Steinkamp also submitted a close guess and was awarded a $50 credit on an electric pump, which he has had installed.

Guesses were made on the number of farm patrons in Cass county using electricity from the distribution lines of the Nebraska Power company. Guesses submitted ranged from a few up to as high as a thousand. With a total of about 1,900 families living on farms in the county, it was difficult to guess the number being served with electricity. The exact number is 123 and our fellow townsmen were among the top winners, walking off with the lion's share of prize awards.

Fine Exhibit of Cass County Keepsakes Here

Historical Society Display Has Many of the Most Valuable Relics in This Section of State.

From Thursday's Daily. One of the outstanding exhibits of the King Korn Karnival is that of the Historical Society. It is a fine collection of Cass county relics. Ancient books are among the oldest articles displayed. An arithmetic is in the group which dates to the 17th century. A Robinson Crusoe, published in New York in 1815 is interesting. Other books on display, dating back over 100 years are a Bible, "Sunny Bank Stories," and "Beauties of the Bible." There is also a group of books which were used in the Rock Bluff school in 1871.

A splendid collection, made by George B. Mann, is also to be found at the exhibit. It contains pictures relative to the early days of Plattsmouth and this section of the state. Another interesting group is the Ivan White collection. Among the articles are a brass kettle, a home-made chair, and urn—all dating back to 1854, the wedding date of Mr. and Mrs. White.

Antique Dishes. Mrs. Oscar Gopen has a group of china ware all over a hundred years old. Cannisters dating to the 1880's are in the exhibition by Plattsmouth citizens. A silver teapot, used in 1810, draws the eye of many of the visitors. Among the miscellaneous groups are to be found wooden shoes worn in 1873; a work basket made in 1847; a chair which has rocked babies of three generations; the surveying instrument used by Thomas Patterson, first surveyor of Cass county, in 1856; a pot hook made by James Ray in 1822; old fashioned horse collar; and a grain cradle.

Clothing from Rock Bluff. Material for one of the Gresses displayed at the exhibit came from Rock Bluff about 80 years ago. Several other garments date to that year. Baby dresses with fine lace made over 40 years ago are also interesting. A home spun blanket made by Mrs. Wm. Young still keeps its color taken from walnuts.

Pictures of leaders in this section of Nebraska will prove interesting to the older persons who remember them or having heard of them. Documents include Thomas Patterson's doctor book, Dr. Miller's day book, bills of sale, school census, maps, and scrap books.

A purse is in the group which was used 100 years ago by Wm. Wiley. There are also exhibits of guns from various periods of history. The World war relics will attract veterans.

Exhibitors from Many Points. Dr. Gilmore, president of the Cass County Historical Society, has one of the largest exhibitions. Judge Charles Graves also has many relics here. Merchants' Parade Proves Colorful Event

Large Array of Handsome and Artistic Floats Prepared for Friday Parade of Carnival.

The merchants parade, featuring the third day of the King Korn Karnival, was one that drew out a very large number of the residents from all sections of the county to line the course of the pageant down Main street from Seventh to Richey street. The various business houses of the city were represented in the line of colorful floats, cars and machinery that formed the long glowing line of beauty.

A large number of the business houses had prepared very elaborate and colorful floats to represent their lines of business and added to the beauty of the floats were many of the charming and popular young ladies of the community as a part of the floats.

A number of the business houses had humorous themes for their part in the parade and which brought much laughter along the line of the route of the parade.

Several Omaha wholesale houses were represented as well as local auto and farm machinery agencies.

This parade is sponsored by the Plattsmouth people and there is no prize awarded for the most attractive floats, the task of arranging them being purely a matter of interest in the success of the community enterprise, in which they deserve the greatest commendation.

The American Legion drum and bugle corps, with their usual fine spirit, were on the job to head the parade.

FRIDAY EVENING PROGRAM

The Friday evening program of the Korn Karnival was dedicated to musical selections and offered a very fine array of talent to take part. This was opened by the exhibition of old time dancing under the direction of Ed Kohrell.

The Knoflock family orchestra, one of the finest musical groups in the city, presented several numbers while the Wabash quartet under the direction of William Rueter, gave several fine selections that were much appreciated. Carl Richert, of Murdock, gave several fine numbers. Ross Nichols, of Louisville, always a popular entertainer, presented a group of saxophone numbers to add to the completing of the program.

The Louisville municipal band, directed by G. M. Corum, superintendent of city schools, gave a fine concert to end the day of pleasure. This band is one of the best in the state and under the able leadership of Mr. Corum has made a great reputation that is well deserved.
