$4,914.23 Sent to the Districts of Cass County

Accumulation Since July and Liquor Tax Distributed Among the Schools This Week.

$4,914.23 were distributed among the districts of Cass county last week. The money comes from the accumulation in the temporary school fund since July and from the liquor tax. $154,107.87 have been collected from the liquor tax in the state of Nebraska during the past year. $2,885.69 came to Cass county.

$14.41 go to each district in the county from the total sent to the directors during the past week, an average of 69.3 cents per pupil.

Early in the year, following the January apportionment, the Omaha board of education brought suit in the supreme court against the state superintendent of public instruction in an attempt to set aside the plan used in making the apportionment. The Omaha school district contended that all of the liquor license money paid in Douglas county should be returned to Douglas county. Early in July the supreme court ruled in favor of Superintendent Taylor. However, it was impossible to include liquor license money in the July apportionment, because of the fact that the Omaha board of education filed a motion for a rehearing. Since the rehearing has been denied, the money is now distributed among the schools of the state.

TAX RISE HURTS CHARITY

New York.—Increases in the state and federal inheritance taxes led the late Jesse Isidor Straus, New York merchant prince and diplomat, to cancel eighteen charitable bequests ranging from $335,000 down to $10,000.

Filing of his will for probate disclosed that Harvard university and the federation for the support of Jewish philanthropic societies of New York City were among those cut off. Harvard was to have received $165,000 and the Jewish federation $335,000.

Straus, former United States ambassador of France, who died Sunday of pneumonia, named his widow, Mrs. Irma N. Straus, as residuary legatee.

WOOL SUPPLY ABOUT SAME

Washington.—The agriculture department estimated that the world wool supply for 1936-37 would be about the same as for the past season. Its bureau of agricultural economics said preliminary estimates of wool production in 1936 for 18 countries showed an increase of two percent over 1935. However, it said part of the increase in production, amounting to about 50,000,000 pounds, was offset by a reduction of about 35,000,000 pounds in stocks of the five principal southern hemisphere countries.

Mrs. Frank Gobelman will be hostess to a meeting of the D. A. R. organization Tuesday evening at 7:30 o'clock. Mrs. E. H. Wescott will present election material.

The C. P. Hamilton clothing store at Glenwood, one of the fine retail clothing stores of western Iowa, was robbed Wednesday night, twenty-five suits and ten overcoats being taken by the robbers.

The clothing taken was valued at $700 according to the estimate made by the owners of the store.

The burglars gained entrance to the store room by letting themselves down a rope from the skylight.

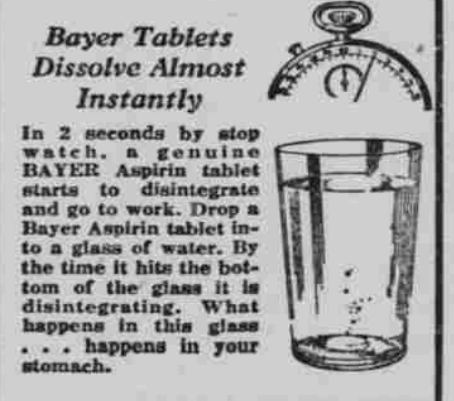

Officers in the nearby towns have been on the alert to apprehend the parties but who apparently were able to elude capture and get under cover before the robbery was discovered.

Rains Bring Better Cheer for Hunting

Promise of Bigger and Better Hunting Conditions When Pheasant Season Opens.

Fall rains over a large part of Nebraska in recent days brought cheer to the state's sportsmen. The rains mean a bigger pheasant crop next year and better hunting conditions when pheasant season opens Oct. 25. Moisture has improved conditions especially in northeast Nebraska, heart of the state's "pheasant belt." Cover, burned away by drought, is coming back, although a recent survey indicates it will be poor at best when shooting opens in two weeks. New vegetation growth, however, is providing excellent torage for the birds this fall, and unless snow is unusually heavy this winter the state will have to do little in the way of feeding to bring the pheasant stocks through in good shape.

A splendid program awaits Nebraska Isaak Walton leaguers at their state convention Oct. 12 and 13 at Fremont. This organization, through its program of conservation in cooperation with the state, is building for the future of Nebraska outdoor sport.

Threatened destruction by an irrigation district of Crescent lake, a federal game refuge in Garden county, brought quick protest from Isaak Walton members in that area in the form of a protest petition for action filed with the governor last week. The irrigation district seeks to lower the floor of its diversion canal, which would lower the already depleted lake level by increasing the outflow.

One of the few flocks of wood ducks in Nebraska was reported last week by Horace Mapes, Lincoln, deputy state conservation officer. Mapes reported a flock of about 50 of this rare species nesting in the trees along the Nemaha river near Falls City. The wood duck is nearly extinct and is protected the year 'round. The size of this flock would indicate that the wood duck is increasing in numbers under the law's protection.

State conservation officers from all parts of Nebraska are reporting flights of geese in larger numbers. Large numbers of sandhill cranes have been sighted also. Snow and cold weather have started these birds on their way south to the palm trees.

Addition of canvass backs and Red-heads to the protected list of ducks this fall may cause many hunters, unfamiliar with these varieties, some trouble in identifying them on the wing. It might be a good idea for such sportsmen to study up on these species. A good rule to follow in order to keep out of trouble is to be especially careful when shooting in
