Proclamation.

Tuesday, October 27th has been nationally designated as Navy Day. This annual event is designed to better acquaint the people of the nation with the purposes and activities of the Navy and the vital part it plays in our national security.

First founded in October, 1775, the Navy has rendered 161 years of service to our country of which we may well be proud. In peace and in war it has upheld this country's traditions with dignity and honor. It is therefore most fitting that we should set aside one day each year on which to honor our Navy.

Therefore, I, E. L. McDonald, mayor of the City of Greenwood, Nebr., do proclaim Tuesday, October 27th, 1936, as Navy Day and recommend that flags be displayed and that patriotic, civic, educational and veteran groups conduct appropriate exercises on that day, that we may increase our familiarity with our Navy and its place in our national life.

In witness thereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused my seal to be affixed.

E. L. McDONALD, Mayor. (Seal) 1tw

An Exception for a Native Son

By IRVIN S. COBB

The clannishness of the rural Vermonter is proverbial. In illustration of this trait a distinguished citizen of the Green Mountain state told me a story the other day. He vouched for it as having a basis of fact.

He said that on a certain rather cloudy day a typical group of natives sat on the porch of the main general store in a town on the shores of Lake Champlain. Among them appeared a youth clad as to dress and having rather an air of assurance about him. In silent disapproval the company took in his belted coat, his knickerbockers and golf stockings and, most disapprovingly of all, the confident, cocksure manner of the alien.

"Good morning, everybody," he said breezily. The elder of the group, a venerable gentleman, made answer for the rest: "How 'do," he said shortly. "Somewhat abashed at the coolness of his reception the young man tried again:

"Looks rather like rain," he said. "Twon't rain," said the old man in a tone of finality. "I rather thought from the looks of those clouds—"

"Twon't rain," repeated the ancient in the voice of one who is not used to being argued with.

A daunting silence ensued. The stranger fidgeted in his embarrassment. The old man fixed him with a cold and hostile eye. "What about your name?" he inquired, as though desirous properly to classify a curious zoological specimen.

"My name is Nelson—Herbert Nelson," stated the youth. "Nelson, hey?" said the patriarch. "There used to be some Nelsons out in the Kent neighborhood. Don't s'pose you ever heard of them."

"I've been hearing of them all my life," said the young man. "I come from New York, but my father's name was Henry Nelson and he born out near Kent in this county."

"Then you must a-been a grandson of the late Ezra Nelson," said the aged Vermonter. His manner perceptibly had warmed; indeed, by now it was almost cordial.

"Yes sir," said the youth. "Ezra Nelson was my grandfather." "Dew tell, now!" said the patriarch, "so you're a son of Henry Nelson and a grandson of Ezra Nelson. Well, in that case it may rain."

Telephone Co. Prepares for the Winter Season

Urging Residents of Community to "Remember Last Winter" When Snow Blocked Traffic.

Employees of the Lincoln Telephone and Telegraph company in the Plattsmouth area will spend a great deal of their time during the month of November visiting farm and town homes which do not have telephones. Area Manager Ray Misner of Plattsmouth told the editor this week.

While the company's employees will, of course, be attempting to encourage the installation of telephones, their interest is not wholly selfish. They remember the hardships endured by many farm families who lacked communication facilities during the bitter weather of last winter—and they are asking these families to "Remember Last Winter!"

Even in those western areas where snow did not block the roads, the long period of bitter zero temperatures made travel almost impossible. It is the aim of employees in all parts of the territory served by the Lincoln company to be able to report that all families are snugly protected by telephone service against the rigors of the coming winter.

The employe sales campaign will begin on November 1, exactly coinciding with the opening of the duck season, and for this reason it has been called the "Open Season" campaign. Useful prizes have been offered to the employe participants in this sales drive.
