Pasture Grasses are Coming Back

Steinauer Farmer Practices Erosion Control, Water Conservation With Good Results.

Despite the long 1936 drouth, native grasses are coming back on a 60-acre contour ridged pasture on the W. A. Steinauer farm a half mile east of Steinauer. Conservation of all the 14 inches of rain that fell last spring after the ridges were constructed is believed largely responsible for return of the bluestems, side-oats grama and blue grama. Restricted grazing and weed control on the pasture have also helped. The pasture was mowed in June to destroy moisture wasting weeds.

With ten miles of contour ridges located from 15 to 25 feet apart on the 60-acre pasture, Steinauer says the ridges caused but little inconvenience in mowing the weeds. He ran the mower parallel with the ridges.

All pasture ridges on the farm were constructed with a 10-foot blade pulled by a tractor, the cuts and the ridges each being 4 1/2 feet in width. The cuts were blocked at 100-foot intervals to keep the water from concentrating at any one point and causing overtopping during a downpour.

To control erosion on his pasture land, Steinauer has fenced all badly gullied areas and planted them to trees and shrubs. Last spring 5,700 trees and 2,300 shrubs were planted on the 60-acre contour ridged pasture.

WANTS LEGISLATIVE PROBE

Omaha.—Ernest Jacobberger, chairman of the Douglas county board of commissioners, said he will ask a legislative investigation of relief spending in the county by the former Douglas county relief administration.

He then instructed E. F. Magaret, director of county relief, to begin taking affidavits for use in connection with the investigation. The Douglas county relief administration, which went out of existence last spring, functioned as a combined county, state and federal organization. Magaret made a statement Tuesday, charging the former DCRA with "reckless squandering of money."

Soon after Magaret began an investigation to trace missing office equipment he says was used by the DCRA and which he values at $20,000. He obtained permission from the city commissioners to engage a private detective for one month.

Norman Durfee, in charge of the federal emergency relief administration office at Lincoln, said the equipment formerly used by the DCRA is now in use at FERA offices in Douglas county.
