DUST CONTINUES TO BLOW

Guymon, Okl. — Dust storms—ranging from a "black blizzard" here to a red brown haze in North Texas—whipped over parts of four southwestern states Monday night. The storms spread in the old "dust bowl" sectors of Colorado, Texas and Oklahoma and in northwest Kansas. Visibility dwindled to 100 feet here, to a block at Amarillo, Tex., and to less than a block at Colby, in northwestern Kansas. For most of Oklahoma and the Texas panhandle, it was the second duster in two days. Farmers here said wheat needed rain "at once." At Garden City, in the southwest corner of Kansas, the storm was mild. Liberal, in southern Kansas, reported skies nearly clear. The storm moved into southern Colorado, delaying highway travel at times. Thin clouds drifted into Denver. The dust at Dallas was the first in many months. It moved out of the panhandle. A strong north wind that rolled billows of dust into northeastern Oklahoma snapped 20 power lines near Tulsa, halting traffic on a highway.
