Old Time Minstrel Show Given Here in Early Nineties

Entertainment for Plattsmouth Baseball Team Then One of Best in State League 1890-93.

John C. Brittain of this city has received an old clipping taken from the Evening News back in the year 1891 and which relates an old-time minstrel show given here for the benefit of the then Plattsmouth baseball team.

Old timers here will recall this team which for several years was a member of the state league and one of the best in the state. The Patterson brothers of this city were members of the team and probably the only member of the team left here is T. M. Patterson, well known insurance representative.

The event was held in the Waterman opera house, located where the present Journal building now stands, the former opera house being destroyed by fire in 1892.

One of the stars of the show was Louis Rehnackle who with Williams, Harry Green, Maupin and Holmes served as the end men and Jack Reeves was the interlocator.

Harvey Holloway, who later served as sheriff of Cass county, was a soloist in the minstrel as was Charles S. Sherman, now sports editor of the Lincoln State Journal, who was then with the Plattsmouth Journal owned by his father, C. W. Sherman.

Jack Brittain was one of the entertainers that went over big in his comic act as a part of the show, he having been a circus entertainer for several years.

"Racky" was one of the big hits of the show with his parodies and in the act with Harry Green, now of Lincoln.

Laughing Around the World With IRVIN S. COBB

Just One Taste Too Much

By IRVIN S. COBB

I HAVE a friend. He lives down in Louisiana where he has lived all his life. He is the only man I ever knew who, in appearance, mannerisms and tricks of voice, lives up to the popular conception of a typical Southern gentleman of the old school.

Last fall, returning from a duck hunt in the Gulf marshes I climbed out of a mud-spattered fitney in front of a white-pillared pile set back among magnolias and live oaks. My old friend, in his long frock, his wide slouch hat, his highly polished boots and his ruffled shirt-front, stood on the porch ready to greet us.

After salutations, I said: "Colonel Lem, in case the natives are suffering from famine in these parts, my chum here"—I indicated my companion of the recent expedition—"has two quarts of guaranteed pre-war Bourbon in his kit-bag."

Colonel Lem tugged mournfully at the ends of his long mustache; a wistful light shone in his eye. He shook his head.

"I gave a violent start."

"Can it be," I asked, "that you, Colonel Lem, of all men, have sworn off?"

"Such is the melancholy fact," he stated.

"When?"

"It seems an eternity since I imbibed my last snort of red eye."

"But why? What made you quit?"

"Well, son," said Colonel Lem, "I've got a feeling that the last barrel of hickory I drank must have disagreed with me!"
