Fate of "Ancient Mariner" May Always Remain Mystery

Grandson Son of Sir Francis Drake Missing Somewhere in South Pacific

By CHARLES GRENHAM, International Illustrated News Feature Writer

San Francisco—Another mystery has apparently been added to the saga of the seven seas, writing finis to the career of a most colorful character.

Capt. Thomas Drake, 74-year-old voyageur, has disappeared. Familiar in most of the ports of the world, which he roamed in solitary independence for the past 20 years, Drake has made his last voyage.

Such is the opinion of coast guard officials who have now given up an eight-month search for the "ancient mariner" or some trace of his tiny boat. No trace has been uncovered of him or his schooner since he sailed out of here last November, bound for Hawaii and the south Pacific.

His 37-foot schooner, Progress, has apparently met with the fate of hundreds of other ships and today is resting in "Davey Jones' locker."

It may be that one of these days Captain Drake will have into port somewhere in the Pacific, drop anchor, and present himself as concrete evidence that an old salt who has been sailing the seas for 60 years cannot be disposed of by mere rumor.

Grandson of Sir Francis

This doughty veteran comes by his seafaring ways naturally. He is a grandson of Sir Francis Drake, who joined the immortals of history when he defeated the Spanish armada. It was Drake whose exploits on the Spanish main established him as one of the most daring mariners in history. Thus it is, perhaps, that Capt. Thomas Drake, his grandson, came most rightfully by his place in modern maritime history.

For the past 20 years, Captain Drake has roamed the ocean, sailing nearly every seaway in the world in his little 37-foot boat. He estimated that he had covered more than 26,000 miles. And always his voyages were made alone. When asked whether the solitude and immense expanses of open sea did not make him lonely, he would shake his head in emphatic fashion and drop a word or two which vaguely expressed the peace and friendliness which he found in what Eugene O'Neill described in "Anna Christie" as "dat old debil sea."

Given Farewell Banquet

Just before Drake left port for the last time, he was tendered a party in his honor by the Richmond Yacht club of San Francisco, of which he was an honorary member. Few probably realized that it was really a farewell banquet—a farewell to one of the most picturesque characters ever to be before the mast.

When he left on his long voyage for Hawaii, Captain Drake carried but enough provisions to last him until he reached Honolulu. He intended to restock there and continue his voyage further into the south Pacific.

It may be that he was taken far off his course and will eventually bob up in typical surprising fashion in some port far off the beaten track. But it is more likely that Capt. Thomas Drake, grandson of the famous mariner of Elizabethan days and voyageur extraordinary, has made his last cruise.

Cow Replevin Case Heard in County Court

Action of Fred Rice Against Constable John M. Meisinger Attracts Large Number.

From Saturday's Daily—

This morning the time of the county court was taken up in hearing a replevin case and which involved the possession of a cow, taken on June 14th as the property of Richard Schliske on a judgment recovered by Emil Koukal, which cow is claimed by Fred Rice, the plaintiff in the action.

The plaintiff claimed that he had purchased the cow on June 3 from Mr. Schliske, making a part payment of $10 that he had secured from his brother, W. P. Rice. On June 4th the plaintiff had completed his work with the brother and had been paid and accordingly had paid the balance on the cow and it was the property of the plaintiff when taken by the constable.

The defense contended that the cow at the time of the incident was owned by Mr. Schliske and he had attempted to sell the cow to several parties at the time the constable was preparing to levy on the animal.

The cow is now in the possession of the plaintiff as a result of a writ of replevin against the defendant and was taken to the premises of the plaintiff.

The presentation of the evidence of the plaintiff occupied all of the morning session of the court.

RIVER IS RECEDING

The Missouri river at this point is taking a decided drop and still while the main river is very high, the waters that have overflowed on the lowlands are receding and in a few days will be back to normal. In the wake of the overflow of the farm lands there has been deposits of mud and silt that will add in filling up the lowlands and add to the value of the land in the future.

The reports of higher water at points up the river have caused some apprehension but with the present high water receding it is not thought that the regular June rise will cause any serious high water.

Those who are farming in the lowlands are engaged in clearing up as well as possible the effects of the high water and preparing to resume their work.

Methodist Church Undergoing Changes

Walls and Ceiling to Be Fitted with Thick Insulated Tile to Improve the Structure.

The First Methodist church is being greatly improved by the placing of thick insulated tile on the walls and ceiling of the main auditorium and the Sunday school room to the west.

This substance is insulated so that it will serve to retain the heat in the building and also help to make it much cooler in the summer season.

The lower portion of the walls are finished in a very attractive wainscoting of lighter tile and which is finished with an attractive tipping. The main side walls are finished in the two tone panels of the tile and the ceiling is also in the large squares of the same material.

The improvement will add greatly to the sound effects of the church and when completed will be found a delightful addition to the equipment of the structure.

The cost of the improvement is being borne by the ladies of the church.

BACH SOUTH PARK STORE BEING REMOVED

From Saturday's Daily—

Frank Rice has purchased and this week tore down the old Bach South Park grocery which stood across the street from the site of the Burlington shops. The store was built during the height of the shops, in the early 1890's by August Bach, Sr.

The store was operated for some time by Mr. Bach while his son, A. G. Bach, operated the store on Main street. In later years, Mr. Bach retired and Mr. and Mrs. Ed Gabelman worked for Mr. Bach in the store for twelve years.

After the strike in 1922 the site became less prosperous. Many of the customers in the South Park district moved and finally, about seven years ago, the stock was removed to be added to the store on Main.

The Bach family came to Plattsmouth in 1879 and started in the grocery business in the early 1880's.

Wabash News

The Ladies Aid of Wabash met last Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. W. L. Murfin.

W. L. Murfin has been assisting with the harvest at the E. F. Marshall place, where they have 160 acres of wheat to harvest.

Carl Hansen has completed laying his corn by, and like of old back east, had the job done before the 4th of July, which was Sunday.

Fred Weyers had the hard luck to lose one of his horses last Tuesday evening, which put him in a bad hole just at this time of year.

Frank Marshall and wife were in Omaha last Sunday and Monday and while the wife visited friends, Frank was attending the grain dealers' school of instruction.

Louis Schmidt was cutting wheat for Fred Weyers and was compelled to make a trip to Murdock to secure some repairs for the binder before he could finish the job last Wednesday.

Louis Schmidt has been grading around the elevator and putting in a crushed rock driveway so trucks can get through in all kinds of weather. The crushed rock presents a clean and neat appearance.

Lester Bosworth has been assisting Fred Towle with the laying by of his corn. That work and the harvesting of the wheat crop comes so close together that it has kept Fred hustling to get it all done.

Harvesting His Wheat

Ralph Richards was harvesting his wheat last week and was assisted by his father, Warren T. Richards. Ralph drove the tractor while his father looked after the operation of the binder making an excellent team and getting a lot of work done in a day.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Obernaulte were at Peru last Sunday where they went to visit with their daughter Miss Melba who is attending Teachers' Summer School at Peru Normal.
