

Wheat Easier After Hitting a Nine-Year Top

Large Crop and Waning of European War and Flood Scare Reverse the Trend.

By T. W. KIENLEN United Press Staff Correspondent Chicago, June 30 (UP). Wheat prices soared to 9-year highs and then dropped sharply during the first six months of 1937, a mid-year survey showed today. Late in June a recovery was underway. Market influences ran the gamut from war scares in Europe to near-flood conditions in Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas where the first of the 1937 crop harvest was begun. During the months when May futures, representing the last of the 1936 crop, were on the market, announced. In January May wheat climbed to a 9-year top of $1.13 1/2, highest for any future after April, 1928.

The January price for a bushel of May wheat was quickly overshadowed as a mad European scramble for supplies carried the price to $1.40 and then to more than $1.42, an 8-year high, in March and April trading.

Fluctuation of this European demand, and finally complete stoppage had a powerful effect on the market. However, casual estimates of the actual wheat taken by Europe bore out December, 1936, forecasts that Europe, Germany in particular, would be an extremely heavy buyer of foreign wheat.

In the early days of June, there was evidence that this demand would be renewed as the 1937 crop becomes available.

As war scares diminished, conditions in the domestic southwest and Canada began to attract attention.

Early drought conditions in Kansas and in the Oklahoma and Texas panhandles were overshadowed by late spring rains that revived the hopes of the dust-bowl sector for a crop.

So bright have the winter wheat prospects become that government and private estimates agreed that a crop of at least 649,000,000 bushels could be expected, giving America its first billion-dollar crop since 1927.

As May futures trading ceased in the wheat pit of the Board of Trade prices were quoted at $1.19 1/2—$1.20, a drop of almost 25 cents a bushel from the season's high.

With the start of June trading interest in the southwest superseded foreign news.

As the harvest season approached and the need for rain increased traders became anxious. There was considerable liquidation in the July futures, however, as much-needed rains began to fall but when these rains kept on beyond even extreme limits of necessity, to the extent of hampering harvesting in Texas, Kansas and Oklahoma, bullishness was restored and increased. Reports of rust started in Texas and have gradually spread north as far as the Dakotas. It has been stated that the spring wheat belt may be acutely stricken with the pest to the detriment of the estimated 200,000,000 bushel spring wheat crop.

Conditions in Canada, particularly in Saskatchewan, drew a great share of attention in the latter part of June. Early reports that drought-damage in Canada might ruin from 5,000,000 to 14,000,000 acres of Canadian wheatlands were substantiated when a Chicago grain expert toured the territory.

H. C. Donovan made a 300-mile circle tour of the territory around Regina and reported "conditions are every bit as bad as they have been pictured. Rains in good volume late in the third week of June will be without material benefit."

Activity in the corn market followed rather generally that of wheat. A moderate boom was instituted early in June on reports that Iowa corn would be materially hampered by excessive spring rains.

Bulges and subsequent dips in the price of a bushel of corn were not so wide nor so violent as the changes in wheat.

ADULTS TAUGHT TO PLAY IN ODD PARIS SCHOOL

Paris. (UP). A school where adults can learn to play with toys is the idea which Mme. Jeanne Valreux is successfully developing in a fashionable part of Paris.

Mme. Valreux believes that adults need relaxation after the strain of a busy day's work and find it in playing with toys. A newspaperman who visited her school saw an elderly lawyer building houses out of miniature bricks, and a bearded professor of the Paris University playing with a miniature railway, assisted by other grave business men.

"These hard-working people forget all their worries here," Mme. Valreux said. "It is better than a gymnasium course. But as a matter of fact this grown-up playroom is a mental gymnasium."

Hostesses Have Many Duties

The job of being hostess on a modern airliner is increasingly complex. In addition to the customary duties of making passengers happy and comfortable the hostess is now required to serve meals from a model kitchen. Cooked on the ground the food is stored on the ship in airtight thermos containers so that the skyway passenger can satisfy his appetite while racing through the clouds.
