Second Place to Plattsmouth Junior Corps

Playing Superior Music but Lacking a Bit in Drill Perfection, West Point Tops Us at Fair.

From Monday's Daily—
Veterans' Day at the state fair in Lincoln yesterday was by far the most successful of all previous efforts along this line. To start with—the weather was ideal, and continued so throughout the day and evening. A downpour in late afternoon last year, canceled evening drum corps and band competition.

Then, too, the crowd yesterday was the largest for opening day in the entire 68 years the fair has been operated. The crowd assembled in the grandstand for the colorful afternoon parade, speeches and auto races also broke all records for the more than a decade since the new steel and concrete grandstand was built.

The service men's parade moved a few minutes before 1 o'clock, comprising a band and numerous senior and junior drum corps. Among the latter was the snappy Plattsmouth outfit that has been going places and doing things since they were newly uniformed a year ago.

Following the parade came a 45-minute program of speeches. Governor Cochran of Nebraska and Governor Phil LaFollette of Wisconsin were the top-notchers on this program presided over by John Curtis, well known Lincoln ex-service man. Department commanders of Nebraska veterans' organizations also spoke, as did W. B. Banning, president of the state fair board.

Following this came the auto races, winding up with the 15-lap sweepstakes in which the crowd was thrilled as cars came dangerously close to pile-ups.

Drum Corps Competition
At 7:30 the drum corps competition took place on the field in front of the grandstand. Juniors performed first and in the draw Plattsmouth came out of the hat No. 1, being the first to take the field. Both then, during the early afternoon parade and throughout the day as they marched and counter-marched about the fair grounds, Plattsmouth came in for a great deal of publicity—equal in value to all it has cost to uniform and train the corps.

Their ten minute competitive drill was executed with only a few minor hitches, and although they lost first place to the much larger West Point corps, the judges agreed there was but a very small difference in the points awarded the two corps. The Plattsmouth corps was highly complimented for their playing ability, being now well into senior corps music, and their concert number during the drill was executed perfectly. Increased drill efficiency will put them in top rank for competition at next year's Legion convention at Fremont, when the "pick of the state" will be on hand.

The West Point corps, first place winners, had a splendidly drilled unit but their music was below par with Plattsmouth. Beatrice junior corps took third money.

Besides the publicity given Plattsmouth drum corps, the forthcoming Korn Karnival was announced to the 13,000 assembled in the grandstand during a Jull in the auto races—all being invited to come here for our show, Sept. 22 to 25.

The Plattsmouth corps was allotted $20 expense money and through winning second place in competition came in for another $15. West Point got $25 additional for taking first.

Fair is Coming Back
From all appearances the Nebraska state fair, like that in our neighboring state of Iowa, is staging a comeback. Exhibits are better, the grounds and buildings present a neater appearance and everything is "looking up" compared to the late depression years when records in attendance were shattered annually up to 1929, when the grand stand occurred that set the fair board to wondering how they would pay for their then comparatively new grandstand and other buildings. The last three years a steady climb in attendance and interest has been noted. With a great Labor day program, including horse racing this afternoon, a rodeo in front of the grandstand and finals in the "Miss Nebraska" beauty pageant in the coliseum tonight—coupled with fine weather, attendance records may again be shattered, and should stand up well the rest of the week.

Miss Capps in Contest
Thirty-eight Nebraska girls competed in last night's Beauty Pageant opening, with Miss Humboldt picked to stand final competition with the one selected from tonight's group of about equal number.

Miss Plattsmouth (Miss Veda Capps) is to participate in tonight's show, going to Lincoln this morning in company with her mother and will remain over tomorrow for the entertainment features provided the contestants while in the capital city. The group that appeared last night are being entertained today at various social functions.

It's state fair time in Nebraska—and countless cars are on the highways headed toward Lincoln and the big show!
