Record Acreage of Winter Wheat Sown This Fall

Reports Show That Crops Are Uniformly Better Than for the Past Year.

LINCOLN, Oct. 13 (UP) — If weather conditions are favorable, Nebraska farmers will have a record acreage of winter wheat seeded this fall. A. E. Anderson, state and federal agricultural statistician, indicated today in his October 1 crop report.

He said that a survey indicated the acreage this fall would be "somewhat larger" than that of last fall. Last year's seeded acreage was the greatest in the state's history but the number of acres harvested was far from record breaking.

Only 75 per cent of the intended acreage was seeded by October 1 and with unfavorable soil moisture conditions, the seeding plans may be modified," he said. "Only a few areas have sufficient moisture to give wheat a fair start. Much of the wheat ground did not get enough moisture to pack the soil or to sprout the wheat evenly."

Anderson estimated that only 46,000,000 million bushels of the state's 74,358,000-bushel corn crop would be husked, the remainder being left in the fields for livestock to consume.

The October 1 reports show that crops in Nebraska this year almost uniformly are better than last year.

although much poorer than the 1933-32 average.

Estimates this year, production last year and average production from 1928 to 1932 inclusive of leading crops follow:

Corn — 74,358,000 bushels this year, 26,859,000 last year, 223,000,000, the five-year average.

Wheat — 48,866,000, 47,339,000, 56,519,000.

Oats — 38,474,000, 19,067,000, 66,421,000.

Barley — 10,822,000, 5,520,000, 15,356,000.

Potatoes — 5,550,000, 4,730,000, 9,526,000.

Sugar Beets — 880,000 tons, 782,000, 996,000.

Apples — 445,000 bushels, 302,556,000.

Alfalfa hay — 1,308,000 tons, 1,360,000, 2,025,000.

All tame hay — 1,667,000 tons, 1,630,000, 2,491,000.
