Armistice Day
Nineteen Years
Aged Brot Joy
Two of Universal Digging at Bad of War-War-Bay Johnny to Perpetuate Another War.

Nineteen years ago today as Good Friday, the Allies and the Central Powers were pointing to the hour of 11 o'clock on the morning of November 11, a strange silence fell over all battle fronts where but a few minutes previous shots had whistled and shattered. It was an event that brought to mind the words of a Boy Scout as he was reading practically every book on the subject of the Armistice to his troop, "It wasn't when the Allied troops were released to begin their counteroffensive against the German forces but rather when the German troops laid their weapons down and returned them to their owners that peace was achieved."

The war was at Lausanne, France, at the forming of came from which were the German troops who had come to terms with the Central Powers and surrendered their arms to the Allied nations. During the month of November, 1918, thousands of miles of country were covered by the armies of the Allied nations in an effort to gain the peace that would end the war. The soldiers dug trenches, built forts, and set up field hospitals. They worked hard to ensure that their men were well fed and supplied with the necessary equipment. They also worked to ensure that the peace they fought for was truly achieved.

In the end, the Armistice was signed on November 11, 1918, and the war ended. The peace that was achieved was not perfect, but it was a step forward in the long journey towards peace. The soldiers who fought and died in the war will always be remembered for their bravery and sacrifice. Their memory will continue to inspire future generations to work towards a world of peace and understanding.
