A CCORDING to a much-traveled friend of mine, there used to be an Irishman who functioned as chief barker for a sight-seeing coach in Chicago. One of the places included in the itenerary of the tours was a famous cemetery.

On a certain morning as the rubber-neck wagon, heavily laden with tourists turned in between the gates of the cemetery, the orator, facing the passengers, preceeded, through his megaphone, to chant his customary explanation:
"To the right you see a shaft erected in mimory ay our Heroic

World War Dead. To the left is a beautiful shaft erected by the rich Mr. Casey in mimory av his wife "This shaft is 100 feet high, and at the top 'tis ornamented wid four female figures."

A woman visitor spoke up: "What do the four figures represent?" she asked. This was the first time the barker had been asked this question and he hesitated a minute before answering. Then inspiration came to him: "Thim? Why them, Ma'am, are Faith, Hope and Charity—and and-Mrs. Casey."

Jack returned to his reading:

Few people know how to brush their teeth properly. Improper brushing not only fails to clean the teeth, but it may actually injure the teeth and gums. Never brush the teeth with a side to side motion, as this method may push the gums away from the necks of the teeth and expose the tooth roots. It is a good plan to brush the upper teeth and the lower teeth separately. In brushing slightly open and place the bristles of the brush on the gums above the necks of the upper left molar teeth. Sweep the bristles of the brush downward over the gums and the teeth toward their chewing surfaces. This movement should be repeated at least ten times so that the cheek surfaces of the upper molar teeth are thoroughly brushed. Then move the brush forward and repeat this action over the bicuspids and cuspid. Then place the bristles of the brush on the gums over the upper front teeth and with a rolling motion sweep the brush downward from the gums to the biting edges. This should be re-cuspid teeth just as you brushed those on the opposite side. Brush the inside surfaces of the teeth as well as their outside surfaces. In brushing the inside surfaces of the upper back teeth, place the bristles of the brush well up on the palate and sweep them downward over the necks of the teeth to the biting surface. The best way to brush the inside surfaces of the upper front teeth is to place the brush lengthwise in the mouth and draw the bristles downward and forward at least ten times.

The teeth in the lower jaw should be brushed in the same manner as those in the upper jaw except that the bristles of the brush should be swept upward over the necks of the teeth instead of downward.

DO NOT FAIL to brush the chewing surfaces of the teeth. Place the bristles of the brush firmly on the chewing surfaces of the teeth and vigorously "shimmy" the brush backward, forward and sidewise. This will help remove any bits of food that may have been crushed into the deep groves.

After brushing the teeth, the mouth, should be thoroughly rinsed. Force the rinsing solution (plain water is effective) back and forth between the teeth for four or five seconds. This will remove any remaining food particles that have been loosened by the brush.
