The bridal procession entered the church to the notes of Lohegrin's wedding march. The groom led by the minister and accompanied by his brother, Mr. Frank Smith, entered the church through the vestry. As the bridal group formed in a semi circle in front of the altar, Dr. McClusky read the lines of holy matrimony. At the conclusion of the ceremony the bride party to the accompaniment of Mendelssohn's wedding march left the church and departed for the bride's home where a reception was held, there being eighty-five friends and relatives present to extend congratulations and well wishes to the happy couple. Frederick and Franklin Wehrlein served as ushers preceding the ceremony.

The bride wore a gown of white marquisette and lace over white satin. Her veil of finger tip length was held by ribbons of the valley. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses and baby breath.

The bridesmaid's gown was of peach chiffon over satin and carried blue delphiniums, pink rose buds and baby breath.

The maid of honor gown was of blue lace over satin and she carried tallman roses and baby breath.

The ring bearer and flower girl were dressed in white.

The ushers wore gray suits, while the groom and best man wore the dark suits. Each wore a boutonniere.

The church was decorated with baskets of hollyhocks and baby breath.

At the reception Dr. McClusky had charge of the guest book which was given as a gift by a friend.

The three-tier wedding cake was baked by Mrs. Henry Nolting and Mrs. Elmer Tritsch, aunts of the bride.

The bridal couple received many beautiful gifts which will long be cherished in their memory.
