

Prison Farm Head Removed from Office

Assistant Superintendent at Genoa Is Removed After Escape of Prisoner Friday.

LINCOLN, July 20 (UP)—The state board of control has dismissed F. R. Brown, assistant superintendent of the Genoa state prison farm, for taking prisoners from the farm on "personal business" which Friday night resulted in the escape of John Smith, 32-year-old Indian, C. W. Kubank, board member, said today.

The board, following an investigation, stated "he (Brown) exceeded his authority in taking these men away from the institution without complying with the statutes in regard to releases for prisoners."

Capt. Walter Rowden of the state penitentiary force was transferred temporarily to the post in the absence of Superintendent P. C. Shockley, now on vacation. Board members said a permanent appointment would be made on Shockley's return.

Brown, a former marine lieutenant, began state service April 25, 1938, and received $75 per month and "subsistence" in the Genoa post.

SUES INSURANCE COMPANY

LINCOLN, July 19 (UP)—Mike A. Gergen, Geneva, filed suit in district court Monday against former Lieutenant-Governor Walter Jurgensen and the Western Life insurance company for $7,627.50.

Gergen charged in 1933, when Jurgensen was president of the insurance company, Gergen loaned him a $5,000 mortgage on 320 acres of land in Fillmore county. Gergen said the loan was to enable Jurgensen, now under sentence for embezzlement, to make a good report to state insurance examiners. He received 130 shares of company stock, he said, as a guarantee that the mortgage would be returned.

Gergen's petition asserts he did not buy the company stock, and that his mortgage was not returned. He said that he discovered in May, 1937, that the mortgage had been paid off.

Mayor Butler to Seek Aid of Bell Company

Will Enlist Services of Northwestern Company to Assist in Stamping Out Gambling.

OMAHA, June 20 (UP)—Mayor Dan Butler today sought the co-operation of the Northwestern Bell Telephone company in stamping out vice betting here.

Butler conferred with A. A. Lowman, president of the company after police raids had discovered teletypes and batteries of telephones in headquarters of bookmaking places. Lowman said that the company was forced to serve who ever applied for wire service—either telephone or telegraph. He promised, however, that information would be given to police investigators armed with proper court orders as to where the equipment was placed.

Butler called upon the police to "bring in the higher ups." "They'll get nowhere arresting bookkeepers and clerks," he said. "Let them bring in the big shots like Sammy Ziegman and Casco Gauchan and let's try to get to the bottom of these bombings."

The upheaval of the bookie business came after three down-town cigar stores allegedly furnishing racing information had been bombed. Butler said regardless of the outcome of efforts to enforce an injunction secured against the bookies by Attorney General Hunter he would make no move to reinstate a $500 occupation tax which the city had collected from some 70 bookies last year.

HOLLYWOOD EXTRA GIRL BLASTS FILM ILLUSIONS

NEW YORK—London—Paris—the Riviera—Bang—Clash—Crash.

The face of the earth turned over in those mad days of 1929, and her own world with it, for the internationally known woman of forty who bares the secrets of the movie extras of Hollywood.

The writer, who has chosen to remain anonymous, has told her startling tale to Paula Wayne for publication in the August issue of Cosmopolitan magazine.

The unknown writer, once a rich woman, tells of her desperate struggle to enter motion pictures and of her first visit to the gigantic agency called "Central Casting." This huge bureau is the clearing house for the Association of Motion Picture Producers and it was to this bureau three years ago that she went, armed with a letter of introduction from a large motion picture stock holder to an executive of the casting bureau.

"Audiences who witnessed 'A Star Is Born' with Janet Gaynor were introduced to an exact counterpart of a Casting Bureau telephone exchange. There are seventy-six trunk lines with hundreds of operators, each controlling a key cabinet. The calls come in with a racing velocity at the rate of 1,000 calls an hour to each girl. The incessant repetitive cry of 'Try-later-try-later-try-later' to the extras' calls for work churns through the room like a loud motif in a Wagner score," the writer reveals.

The most important possession of an "Extra" is her wardrobe. Her clothes often determine whether or not she gets a job. With color movies gaining in popularity, according to the writer, even this will become hopelessly complicated, because "in Technicolor you are prohibited from wearing black or white or red.

"An entire reversal of make-up is employed in this medium and is far from flattering. A grey liquid grease paint is used in the shape of a powder foundation and that is all. No lipstick is permitted and you look exactly as though you have been planted and dug up—the idea behind it is that the color-lighting will bring out your natural complexion."

"The life of an 'Extra' is imprisonment to the normal socially-minded person, because of the great social barriers set up between people of different professional rank," the writer says.

The one compensation in an "Extra's" life (though it comes to few) is the opportunity to work in a picture with the Great Garbo.

"I have never known any personality that has aroused so avid, so hungry a public curiosity as this woman. It extends to her co-workers, it inoculates her extras, it pervades the front office of her own studio.

Despite what people think and the many rumors that revolve around her — it has nothing to do with her self-imposed exile from her fellow man. Whatever element she possesses that divides her from the crowd emanates from the girl herself. She resembles one of Luther Burbank's unexplainable botanical sports of nature, arriving strangely and exotically equipped for a rare cinema completeness.

"Her face is like a handful of white camella leaves and modeled on constant and pure lines — the lashes are long by nature and raise on and off the eyes with the straight-forward beauty of a child's. When not in animation it is a countenance unusually bare of expression."

ADVANCED CHIROPRACTIC

For the past four weeks Dr. Stibal has been attending clinics in Council Bluffs, Iowa receiving advanced instructions in chiropractic.

Dr. J. F. Ross of Indianapolis, Indiana, a teacher, writer, research worker and chiropractor since 1918 has discovered and developed in private practice and clinics for the past nine years all over the United States a unique system of treatment that requires only your hands to procure, according to Dr. Stibal, some unbelievable results on clinical patients as witnessed. Dr. Ross asked for the most difficult cases the practitioners had and invariably procured noticeable relief. This is the work Dr. Stibal has had a thorough review in and intends to do away with the less scientific and rougher chiropractic that is less effective and has served its time. Diets will be regulated to produce proper chemistry and reduce irritations. Besides Stibal there will be only one other practitioner of the kind in Nebraska at present.

More Farm Tenant Loans to be Made

Twenty-four Nebraska Farmers Received Loans This Year; Estimate Sixty Loans Coming Year.

Approximately 60 Nebraska farm tenant families will become owners of their own farms by next spring through 40-year tenant purchase loans at 3 percent interest, made by the Farm Security Administration under provisions of the Bankhead-Jones Act, announced L. A. White, Nebraska state FSA director. Mr. White's announcement came at the close of a two-day session of the FSA advisory committee held July 8 and 9 at Farm Security Administration headquarters in Lincoln.

Meeting with the committee were Paul V. Maris, director of the tenant purchase division at Washington, and E. E. Greene, regional head of that division at Lincoln.

Twenty-four former tenants received loans with which they have purchased farms during the half-year's operation of the new program in the fiscal year ending June 30. Those loans were in the five Nebraska counties designated last winter for first year participation—Gage, Cedar, Dawson, Morrill and Polk. Nebraska's allocation for the first year amounted to $197,105 based on the $10,000,000 appropriation by Congress for the entire country, and apportioned to the various states according to farm population and prevalence of tenancy. All but $905.90 of Nebraska's allocation was loaned, according to Mr. Greene's report to the committee. Greene estimated that more than 80 loans will have been made at the close of the present fiscal year, including the 24 already made.

Nebraska's allocation for 1938-39 will be $492,762.50, which is exactly 2 1/2 times the amount available the first year. This increase, Greene said, is in proportion to the increased national appropriation for tenant purchase loans. Congress this year appropriated $25,000,000.

Loans will be made in four additional Nebraska counties in 1938-39, and the program will be enlarged in the five counties already designated, Greene said. The new counties will be entitled to nine or ten loans and four or five additional loans will likely be made in the five originally designated counties. A larger number of loans per county lowers administrative costs, he said. Announcement of the counties will be made soon and will follow official designation by the secretary of agriculture.

Mr. Maris complimented the Nebraska committee on their work during the past year, and predicted that the 60 tenant farmers who will become purchasers this fiscal year will be on their farms in time for spring work in 1939. The early start this year on the tenant loan program, compared with the late start last year, will make this possible, he said.

"Annual payments including interest and principal will in many cases be less than the rent formerly paid by the purchasers," declared Maris. He pointed out that more than 38,000 tenant farmers, farm laborers and sharecroppers in the 333 designated counties throughout the United States applied for loans last year. The total number of designated counties the country over will be raised to 700 this year, he said.
