Rotary Hears Background of Present Crisis

Milo Price of the High School Faculty Discusses History of Germany and Italy.

The Rotary meeting Tuesday was under the leadership of Frank A. Cloldt and who had arranged a most interesting program and one fitting to the stirring events of the world today.

Milo Price, teacher of history in the high school, was the speaker of the day and gave a fine discussion of the history of Germany and Italy from 1871 to 1914, or from the completion of the unification to the world war and its disaster to the whole world. He traced the formation of the German empire from the Geyman confederated states and the rapid development of power through the unified state and which had reached its height at the outbreak of the war in 1914. He also followed the history of Italy from the crowning of Victor Emmanuel as the king of united Italy and the succeeding moves in the national history that had made Italy an ally of Germany and Austria, only to join the allied forces in 1916 in the world war.

The mistakes of the treaty makers after the world war was shown by the speaker when ignoring the suggestions of President Wilson, the foreign diplomats had written into the treaty many clauses that were today the cause of many of the evils that are threatening the engulfing of the world into a great bloody conflict.

The coming of the telegraph to Plattsmouth, Nebr., April 7, 1872:

The following is an agreement made between J. P. Springer of the first part and Burlington and Missouri River railroad in Nebraska of the second part, under which the former is to erect for the latter a telegraph line from Plattsmouth to Lincoln, both in Nebraska:

The said party of the second part is to provide at its own expense and deliver along the line of its road all the material necessary to the construction of said telegraph line, namely poles, brackets, insulators, wire, telegraphic apparatus, etc., to furnish for the use of said Springer a hand car and to pay at the rate of $18.00 per mile for the erection of said telegraph line to be measured and allowed for from station to station as completed, if so required.

The said party of the first part agrees to erect the said telegraph line along the line of said railroad at such places as directed by the chief engineer of said road, to set the poles from 3 1/2 to 4 feet deep in the ground and at distances of 200 feet apart upon the bottom and prairie lands and at distances not over 200 feet apart upon bluffs and upon all prominent points of said bluffs.

He also agrees to clear away trees, branches, etc., 20 feet each side of said line when there is any probability of damage to the wires and poles by allowing these to remain.

The said Springer also agrees to provide at his own expense all the necessary tools, etc. He also agrees to attach the brackets securely to the poles and to firmly fasten the wire to the insulators between the brackets upon that side of the poles which is fartherest distance from the center of the curves. He also agrees to firmly tamp the earth about the poles and to do a good and workmanlike piece of work to the satisfaction and acceptance of the chief engineer.

He further agrees to complete the line to Ashland during the present month of April and the total line to Lincoln in one week after the rails shall have been laid to that point. He also agrees to set two poles opposite each station house near together and to put the brake between them and to make all necessary connections therefrom to the stations.

(NOTE: In March, 1844, L. F. B. Morse and his friend constructed the first practical telegraph line. It extended from Washington to Baltimore. The first message was a sentiment.)

MARRIAGE OUT OF HOCK

Some time ago Judge A. H. Duxbury had a call from two Omaha young people who had the spirit of the summer in their hearts and the desire to be wedded. The court while relaxing at home, was glad to assist the young people in attaining their happiness and accordingly with the spoken word, made them as one in the eyes of the law and man. It was then revealed that the groom had but one dollar available to liquidate the amount for the license and ceremony. While the ceremony states that let no man set them apart, the court retained the marriage certificate until the amount was forthcoming.

This morning Judge Duxbury received a letter inclosing the funds for the marriage and the assurance of the young people from their home in Omaha that the marriage had been one big success and they wished the written evidence which will be a joy and pride to their home.
