He resided on a farm for a number of years, then was employed by the Nebraska Power Co., then as has been noted he was employed by the government for a long period of years. He loved his family and with the wife and mother rejoiced as the star in the future grew bright and then gay when he saw the proud place they had won in their different occupations. A lover of music, it was his desire that his children should become accomplished musicians as this desire he lived to see fulfilled. Kind and considerate he had a host of friends. Ill health for months then a stroke which hastened his end. Everything humanly possible was done to stay the hand of death, but to no avail. No man has power over spirit Those left to mourn his going besides his immediate family are a sister: Mrs. James Abbott; one brother, Walter Chase of Omaha; a brother, James Chase, at Burr, Nebr.; many relatives and friends. Mrs. Willis and Kincaid won the match.

Motor Fiel from Farm Products. In the east, there has been a mixture of vegetable alcohol and gasoline used for some time, made from fixing gasoline and denatured alcohol, which is known as Agrol and has been found superior to the finest grades of gasoline, as the percentage of alcohol makes it more volatile and gives it a greater kick. The manufacture of this product of the farm and the factories combined would require it if it was generally used which it is expected to be in time, would use the crops grown from 30,000,000 acres of land, and is manufactured from corn, kaffir, rye, barley, wheat milo and potatoes as well as many other farm products. Should the use of this blended fuel become general there would be used in the production 30,000,000 acres of land which would mean more than all of the taking out of production which the farm bills have anticipated. It would also give employment to 50,000 men in the Agrol factories and at the same time employ a million farmers in raising the products. This product has been used to a limited extent by racing cars and other cars which have attained a high speed. Used Grain Drills Reasonable. I have several used grain drills, in fine condition, ready for use and ready for delivery, for sale. Murray Hardware. s15-25w Murray Library Notes. Bible School Lesson Study! Sunday, September 18th By L. Neitzel, Murdock, Neb.

"Jonathan: Courageous Friendship" I Sam. 20:4-17. Before going into the lesson proper, we should be able to understand and know what true friendship is, and give the right definition. There are several: (a) the blending of two hearts in likeness and desires; (b) a deep, quiet, enduring affection formed upon mutual respect and esteem. The Bible expresses this attitude thus: "A man that hath friends must show himself friendly; and there is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother." (Prov. 18: 24). In Heb. 2:11 we find a remarkable statement concerning our Lord: "For both he that sanctifieth and they who are sanctified, are all one; for which cause he is not ashamed to call them brethren." See also John 17:21. Having made this point clear, we can now take up the story of David and Jonathan. There is no parallel in the Bible where two men formed such a friendship. Here are two young men, each displaying a courage and heroism that brought forth admiration for the other. (See Chap. 14 and Chap. 17). There was formed this friendship which endured after death. Speaking of Jonathan, there are about nineteen men in the Old Testament by that name. None are of great importance except one (Judges 17:18), a descendant of Moses, and our hero. His name means "Jehovah has given." Of his family we know nothing except the birth of a son five years before his death. (II Sam. 4:4). Jonathan was about 30 years old when first mentioned; he was the oldest son of King Saul, and was regarded as the successor to the throne; he was a man of great strength and ability and activity—but tender-hearted as a woman. Taking him all in all he is the noblest figure in the Old Testament, the flower and crown of Hebrew history, the knight without reproach; there was not a crooked line or a dark spot in his conduct. More than twenty years have passed since the victory over the Philistines recorded in Chap. 14, during which time Saul proves himself unfit for such a high position; David is anointed to be Saul's successor, and Goliath, the Philistine giant, is slain by David, who is brought into the presence of Saul as Israel's great deliverer. At this hour Jonathan's and David's friendship begins. Each of them found in the other the affection that he found not in his own family. For the phrase, "the soul of Jonathan was knit with the soul of David," see also Gen. 44:30, where Jacob's love for Benjamin is similarly spoken of. Nothing more exquisite could be written than that "Jonathan loved him as his own soul." Then see David's lament. (II Sam. 1:26). History cites a number of very true friendships, such as: Luther and Melancthon, Horace and Virgil, Damon and Pythias, Goethe and Schiller, and others. It is very interesting to note that in no place in the sacred record is David said to have loved Jonathan. The love is always on Jonathan's side for David. While everyone would grant that David certainly loved Jonathan, yet the record would seem to indicate that the more unselfish, the deeper, the more spontaneous love was on Jonathan's part. Both of these men had the same desire, ambition and faith to serve God; theirs was a common cause to serve the Kingdom of Israel and see the nation strong and Godly, occupying the place God had promised to her. The friendship is tested and sealed. Saul in his jealous nature, who could not see a man that was honored by the people, for valor and courage, determined to kill him. It became an obsession which overpowered him, although when in a different mood, he rewarded the young man, to make him his son-in-law. The two friends saw the danger for David and they plan to find out the temper of Saul. (Lesson verses will explain). This is the last meeting in life for these two friends. The parting is a very touching scene—the embracing—the parting kiss—the tears that flowed, all testify to the strong feeling that overpowered him. Beautiful and touching as this friendship was, there is a friendship that surpasses this, and that is the friendship of Jesus Christ, who gave his life for those he loved? No, he went further, he prayed for his tormentors. "In due time Christ died for the ungodly . . . when we were yet sinners" (Rom. 5:6-8). He gave his life for his sheep (John 10:15) — NOT for his friends. No wonder the world cannot understand the Christ. Few men have fathomed the depth of the love of God in Christ. Paul prayed that the church at Ephesus "may be able to comprehend" . . . what is the depth, length, breadth and height, and to know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge. (Eph. 3:18, 19). What a friend we have in Jesus.
