Bible School Lesson Study!

Sunday, October 16 By L. Neitzel, Murdock, Neb.

"Reverence for God" Ex. 20:7; Math. 5:33-37; Math. 12:33-37.

One of the besetting sins of all ages has been irreverence for God; all classes and ages indulge in this sin. While we speak in the lesson, especially of the name of God and its misuse, we would call attention to another phase of irreverence, and that is the house of God—the church building—which is dedicated to his service; but notice to what irreverent use it is put—plays, entertainments, bazaars, lectures, shows, theatricals—loud and boisterous behavior and talking, to which the preachers set a bad example.

In this respect the Catholic churches set us a good example. The noise is oft so great that the announcing of the opening hymn is not heard. Such conduct is an insult to God; such people are not in a worshipful mood. The same scenes are enacted at the close of such "service," which it never was. Let us teach reverence for the house of God. (See Eccl. 5:1). This commandment is repeated in Deut. 5:11. The first commandment set forth the absolute uniqueness of God; not to worship any other God. The second commandment deals with the subject of the manner of worship—no images were to be tolerated. The third commandment continues to dwell on the sacredness of the relationship that should exist between God and man. Man is warned about his speech, that he may not take God's name in vain. The "Name" here stands for God himself, not titles. It expresses all his attributes. His name is taken in vain, when used in supporting a false statement, a sin which is known as perjury. Perjury is the abyss of moral crime. Recall Simon Peter's betrayal when he "swore" he did not know the Lord. Peter not only lied, but he actually dared to call God as a witness that he was speaking the truth. The marvel is that God allowed Peter to live five minutes after such a terrible crime.

Men do not use the name of their friends to swear by. But men use the name of God, who they do not believe in, and who they say does not exist. Such acts are absurd, to say the least. Man uses God's name in vain by telling stories and jokes in which the name of God is ridiculed. God will not hold him guiltless who takes his name in vain—punishment is sure to follow!

Jesus interprets the third commandment. Whenever man calls upon God to witness for him, he arouses suspicion that his cause is weak. The man who establishes a name for veracity and integrity need but to say yes or no—that is sufficient. No one has any right to swear by anything, for they do not belong to him, either by heaven, earth, Jerusalem nor his head—these oaths were common among the Jews. But did Jesus forbid to take an oath? By no means. God himself swore to Abraham. (See Gen. 22:16; Acts 2:20; Heb. 3:11).

Jesus himself used an oath. (Math. 26:64). There are times and occasions when it is necessary to swear, as seen in Deut. 6:13; 10:20; Jer. 4:2; Ps. 63:11). It would seem that Christ was referring to common conversation of men, in the light of O. T. teaching and N. T. practice, our Lord did not by these words mean to prohibit taking an oath in civil and ecclesiastical courts; if all men were absolutely honest, such oaths would not be necessary. A common fallacy is here exposed of man's sayings: "You cannot judge others, and you have no right to judge others." Jesus says: "The tree is known by its fruit." The man who uses foul and dirty language has a foul and dirty heart. Clean the fountain and the speech will be clean. The last part of our lesson proves the aforesaid.

The critics of Jesus attributed the miracle of Jesus to the devil, which is an absurd statement. The warning of Jesus against "idle words" for which men will be held responsible, should be heeded. What a record will confront most of us! See that the record is blotted out through the blood of Jesus.
