J. C. Cook in Attack on New Deal Policies

Fremont Attorney Speaker at Republican Rally Last Night—Heinke Also Speaks.

From Wednesday's Daily—The republicans of Cass county last night staged their rally at the court house here to close the campaign in this section, a well filled court room greeting the campaign party.

Miss Minnie Guthmann, committeewoman of the first ward presided and introduced Carl D. Ganz, of Alvo, county chairman, who took charge of the meeting and presented the candidates.

The county and non-political candidates were presented to the audience by Mr. Ganz, comprising Ray Norris, commissioner second district; Ray F. Becker, candidate for register of deeds; Joe Mrasek, candidate for sheriff; John E. Turner, county treasurer; C. E. Ledgway, clerk of the district court; George R. Sayles, county clerk; William A. Metzger and Fred L. Carsten, candidates for the legislature; Mrs. Lora Lloyd Kleck and J. R. Reeder for county superintendent.

Speaks on Double Liability

H. A. Schneider, of this city, was presented by Chairman Ganz and gave a short statement in favor of the adoption of the constitutional amendment providing for the repeal of the double liability for bank stockholders in state banks. He explained that the national bankers were exempted from this, that congress had created the Federal Insurance Corporation, insuring deposits in banks and in which both state and national banks were members and paid in their dues. The law kept many smaller places from having state banks owing to the dislike of persons to purchase stock under the present law.

Troy L. Davis, mayor of Weeping Water, gave a very severe attack on the amendment that proposed to legalize slot machines and gambling devices in the state of Nebraska, presenting a resolution urging voters to oppose the amendment and which was adopted by a unanimous vote of the meeting.

"Bill" Matschullat Speaks

William F. Matschullat, former Plattsmouth man, now secretary of the republican county central committee, gave a short talk stressing the need of supporting the entire republican ticket. He praised the record of Charles J. Warner, candidate for governor, stressing his long service in the legislature covering twenty-five years and that he had a great knowledge of the needs of the state. He attacked the candidacy of Governor R. L. Cochran as an attempt to create a political machine. He also stated that the attitude of Senator Warner on the matter of the payment of the old age $30 per month had been represented and that then he had favored only the levying of tax on spirits and the application of the entire one cent gasoline tax on the old age assistance fund.

Scores New Deal Program

George E. Heinke of Nebraska City, candidate for congress in the first district, in his remarks largely attacked the agricultural program of the administration and also traced the depression of the Hoover administration as the result of wartime prices and speculation. The present condition, the speaker stated, was due to the many experiments that had shaken the confidence of the business interests and people of the nation. He pointed to the fact that there had been five agricultural programs made by the administration since taking office and none had provided relief. He scored the importation of grain and live stock from other countries and pleaded for the American market for the American farmer. He urged that democrats join in the overthrow of the new deal and the restoration of the government to its former standards and under which the nation had become great.

Sees Danger in New Deal

J. C. Cook, attorney, of Fremont, was then presented and gave a very able talk on the national issues and a scathing attack on the new deal and its policies.

Mr. Cook attacked the present administration for its attempts to enact the supreme court bill as well as that of the reorganization bill as attempts to weaken the structure of the government and as attacks on the constitution. Mr. Cook stated that this was the time for Americans to save their nation and cited the statement of Earl Browder, national communistic chairman, urging support of the new deal. He charged that the people of the nation had been asleep and that they must now be aroused if the spirit and purpose of the constitution was to be preserved. The speaker also showed that testimony before the Dies committee was such as to arouse the people to a real danger. He praised democratic senators and congressmen who had opposed many of the new deal measures, notably the supreme court and reorganization bills. He also pointed out that many new and more dangerous measures awaited the return of the new deal to power.

This makes him eligible to compete in the district contest and should he win in that event he will then go to Omaha for the state classification.

In the girl's division Harriet Case scored second to Dorothy Everett from Weeping Water. The margin of difference between the two was very small. The other representatives from Plattsmouth were Janet Westover and John Tidball, who made very fine showings. All were among the highest 25 per cent. Miss Westover made a good record in the government test.

All of the towns in the county were represented and the contest was carried on at the Weeping Water high school. Miss Alpha Peterson, county superintendent of Cass county, had charge of this contest and delegated the testing to Supt. Leonard Behrends of Weeping Water. Others who assisted were Supt. Corum of Louisville, Supt. Devoe of Plattsmouth, Miss Teselle of Avoca, and Supt. Bugbee of Union.

W. G. Boedeker, Murray Banker, Tells in Interesting Manner of Motor Tour of Europe.

One of the very interesting meetings held recently by the Rotary club was featured Tuesday at the weekly luncheon when Glen Boedeker, Murray banker, was the guest speaker.

The subject of the talk was that of his recent European motor tour and gave the members of the club an intimate glimpse into the European nations of today and of the impressions that he had gained of the people and their customs as well as national trends.

The Boedeker family traveled through several of the countries and had glimpses of the life in many radically different nations from the Latin country of Italy and France to the Swiss, German, Holland and Belgium.

It was an address everyone followed very closely and took the auditors with the Boedekers through the beauties of Paris, the pleasant provincial country of the republic through Italy to the majesty of the city of the seven hills, mighty Rome and thence north to the Germanic nations. Mr. Boedeker remarked on the fine, clean and attractive appearance of the cities and rural sections through which they passed and particularly of Holland where the national habit of thrift and cleanliness was much in evidence. Passing through the various countries it was not until they reached Belgium that they found the fear of war a disturbing factor with the residents.

It was a talk that all will long remember and the Rotarians felt very appreciative of the visit of Mr. Boedeker and his talk.

E. H. Wescott was the leader of the meeting.
