Bible School Lesson Study!

Sunday, December 11th By L. Neitzel, Murdock, Neb.

"The Sin of Covetousness" Ex. 20:17; Luke 12:13-21; 1 Tim. 6:6-10.

This tenth and last commandment touches the lives of more people than the first nine. Scholars tell us that no other nation in the world has a law against covetousness, except the Hebrews. They stood on a higher plane than the others.

"Thou shalt not covet," passes beyond the domain of civil magistrates into that intellectual realm of motive, desire and thought, where God alone is Lord and Judge. What is the meaning of the word "covet." It means a delight in some object, a sense of desire to possess, to wish for.

In the New Testament Paul translates it "lust." It is often rendered "desire," sometimes "covet" and occasionally "concupiscence." These translations will help to throw light upon the word.

Herein lies the searching and revealing power of this last word of the Decalogue. The desire for that which cannot lawfully be possessed is distinctly forbidden; and so this tenth word passes much deeper in its moral requirement than any that preceded it. It sets up God's right over the realm of desire." (G. Campbell Morgan).

Covetousness is the root of all sin. Eve in the temptation saw that the tree was "good for food" and that it was "pleasant to the eyes" and a tree to be "desired." She took of the fruit, etc.

Unholy desires is the inspiration to murder. So it is to adultery, and theft—thus the whole realm of human inter-relation is disorganized and broken up by the dishonoring of the tenth commandment. The terrible consequences that grow out of covetousness. One may say: "What great harm is a mere guilty look, a mere guilty wish, a mere guilty longing?" Well, are they so harmless? Behold the guilty look of David at Bathsheba from his palace roof, the guilty longing of Achan for the ingot of gold, the guilty desire of Ahab for Naboth's vineyard—did nothing come of them? In the first case, the bad desire led to adultery; in the second to theft; in the third to murder.

In the parable that Jesus relates, he gives a warning. This man in the multitude was afraid he would not get all that was coming to him from the inheritance. Jesus rebuked him and gave the people a solemn warning that covetousness would not blind them, and make them believe that an abundance of earthly possessions would bring happiness.

We find the evil word, "covet" or "covetousness" nineteen times in the New Testament, proving its significance. Next we are dealing with a man whom Jesus uses for an illustration in point. "A rich man"—no name given—any rich man—there is no odium attached to his riches as such. It is no crime to be rich. Abraham was rich. No hint of wrongful ill-gotten riches; rather the contrary! He owns a good farm; he is a good farmer, pays his help well; he was honest, stood well in the community—many, many have envied him; the farm produced well, so well that he had not room for the harvest; even his covetousness has nothing repulsive about it. He lived just for earthly things; they and they alone filled his life and soul. That was all. The world has many duplicates. This man plans for the future—which was right. He spends money to build, to house the harvest—then has a monologue with his soul. Note the pronoun "my" six times—the personal pronoun "I" six times. This man was all animal—no blue sky in his universe. His universe was a great dinner table—he told his soul that it would find heaven in a barn. What had he omitted in his reckoning? God!

Now God speaks to him. What a contrast between the phrases, "I will say to my soul," and "but God said." There comes a time when God will say something to every soul. He has the last word. "Thou foolish one"—devoid of sense, without mind or reason.

When God says I want you tonight, man cannot write a note of excuse. Stripped naked, a bare, desolate soul, he passes from our sight, lost in the darkness of eternal remorse, his voice still dolefully echoing the condemning voice of God. "Thou fool! Thou fool!"

What a beautiful picture Paul paints for us; godliness and contentment is great gain—all to be found in Christ Jesus. How much does a man need to sustain life? Food and shelter—all else becomes a burden. We are coming naked into the world, and leave it naked. Then why the unholy desire to accumulate much earthly store? The love of money brings a long train or sorrow. What will man not do for getting Gold! These unholy desires God alone can change through Jesus blood, and plant in the soul the seed of righteousness, the fruit of which is described in Gal. 5:22, 23. (Please read).
