FRENCH PREMIER WINS VOTE

PARIS, Dec. 10 (UP)—Premier Daladier won a narrow and temporary victory at the Chamber of Deputies early today when he was given a vote of confidence by 315 votes to 241 with 53 deputies absenting.

The vote was on the general policy of the government. It had been expected that Daladier would win it. But in doing so he failed to rally any permanent majority committed to his support to replace the socialists and communists who are now in opposition after two years of the popular front. Conservatives and nationalists who voted for Daladier made it plain that they did not commit themselves as regards the future, and that their votes would depend on the individual issue involved.
