Some one who was hungry for a good chicken dinner visited Wm.

Spangler's chicken house Monday night and stole two fine Buff Orpington hens. Barking of the dog awakened Mr. and Mrs. Spangler, and they reached the window in time to see a car go down the hill. Chicken stealing is too common. It should be punished to the fullest extent.

The home of Edward Hennegor who had been over to Lincoln visiting his mother at the hospital, was found ablaze during his absence last Thursday. Very fine work by the fire department extinguished the blaze with slight loss.

Entertained at Banquet.
The Pep Girls of the Weeping Water high school entertained at a banquet for the high school football boys Monday evening in the dining room of the Congregational church. Miss Betty Hinds, president of the Pep Girls was in charge of the arrangements and Mrs. Vera Dowler served the banquet.

The dining room was decorated with football pennants, footballs and other football paraphernalia. At the tables which seated ninety-six enthusiastic football fans the favors were small football players. L. H. Behrens, superintendent of schools, welcomed the guests and introduced Harold Hinds, of Lincoln, a graduate of the Weeping Water high school, who acted as toastmaster.

F. L. Pokorney, high school football coach, awarded the football letters, and R. L. Hansen, assistant football coach awarded the trophies to the men of last year.

Charlie Brock, of the University of Nebraska, was the first speaker. He told of his experience in the East-West game at San Francisco, and Jack Dodd, of the University of Nebraska talked on "Eligibility for Football Team at University of Nebraska."

Pictures of the Missouri, Kansas and Iowa football games closed the program, which had been filled with interesting features.

The next meeting of the club will be their annual business meeting March 7, which will follow a one o'clock luncheon at the home of Mrs. Lawrence Wiseman.

Old Landmark Disappears.
Another old landmark has disappeared from our midst. Knud Jensen bought the house which stood just north of Marshall's shoe store, and has torn it down preparatory to rebuilding it to house food lockers, on the lot. For years this building housed our town's "photograph gallery" as we used to call it. Many are the pictures which could be found in the old family albums which were taken into that building. Geo. Wood, now of Louisville, is one of the last photographers who was located there and he did some very fine work while he was in business here.

The wives of the small town photographers are heard no more. His "Look pleasant, please," or his "Smile now," and his telling the children to "watch for the birdie" are other memories of the past, which are unknown to the younger generation.

Jolly Mixers' Dinner.
The Jolly Mixers enjoyed a dinner Monday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Cole. Mrs. C. H. Gibson and Mrs. L. P. Wolcott were assistant hostesses. Change School Instructors.
Miss Marjorie Tye, the talented and popular instructor in the home economics department of the Nehawka schools asked to be relieved of her duties with the Nehawka schools as she had been offered employment by the Lincoln City schools and departed for her new work in the capital city. One of the applications for the position was that of Miss Helen Christensen, formerly an instructor at Springfield in Sarpy county, who was elected to fill the vacancy. Miss Christensen has been making her home at Essex, Iowa with her parents.

Entertained Their Friends.
Mr. and Mrs. Herbie Kuntz were host and hostess to a number of their friends Sunday evening when they served a delightful 6 o'clock dinner. Cards were played during the evening. Those present beside the host and hostess and family were Messrs. and Mesdames Frank Lemon, Nelson Berger and Albert Anderson and son Kenneth.

Old Friends Were Pallbearers.
At the funeral of the late Mrs. Rachel (Murray) Shrader which was held from the United Brethren church in Nehawka, conducted by Rev. Small, the following friends and neighbors were the acting pall bearers: Robert B. Stone, Parr Young, Ole Lundberg, Ray Christwiser, George Hansen and A. F. Hansen. They all have resided in Nehawka and vicinity and have, like their friend who passed away, struck many a hard blow to bring this territory from its wild estate to the very fine country which it is now.

It Was Different Monday.
Sunday the radio sent out the warning there was to be a "moderate" cold wave, and it came, but few seemed to find any moderation in it. Speaking of the snappy spell Rural Carrier Robert H. Chapman said: "When the sun shines bright and the weather is nice and warm, he sees his patrons out buzzing around on the farm and talking over the fences with their neighbors. But last Monday nary a one did he see, they did not even come out to get the mail when he went past." The kind of weather which comes and goes makes a difference.

Home From Hospital.
Miss Hazel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Drennen was taken last week with a severe attack of appendicitis and was rushed to the Nebraska City hospital where an operation was performed immediately. Rachel Murray Shrader was born April 10, 1853 in Monitor county, Missouri, and passed away at her home in Nehawka at 2:45 Thursday

INTERESTING NAVAL BOOKS

The Plattsmouth public library has been fortunate in obtaining two outstanding books for their shelves to be used by the public. Both books are of a naval nature, making very interesting and enjoyable reading material for both young and old. The books that the library was fortunate in obtaining are: "The Ramports We Watch," by George Fielding Elliot, and "Annapolis Today," by Kendall Banning.

The following is a brief sketch of the "Annapolis Today" book which is the better of the two:
"For almost a hundred years the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis has trained the commissioned officers of our navy. Rich in tradition and achievement, Annapolis has reason to be proud of the thousands of officers and gentlemen who have received their schooling where Sever meets the tide."

This book offers a fully rounded picture of life at the naval academy. The career of the typical midshipman is closely followed at every stage from the anxious but exciting today when the pebble is sworn in to that proud moment four years later when he receives his commission as an ensign in the navy or a second lieutenant in the marine corps. His work and his play, in fact every activity which goes to make up his crowded life, receives its due quota of attention. Nor is the visitor to Annapolis forgotten. All of the questions he is likely to ask about the history, customs, and regulations of the academy are clearly answered and there is even a chapter on what every drake (midshipman slang for the visiting girl friend) should know.

Mr. Banning's story has movement and charm and, best of all, complete authenticity. Any reader who is interested in Annapolis—and who isn't—will find it delightful reading.

Kendall Banning is also the author of "West Point Today," a volume describing life at the United States Military Academy which contains much information on the less official aspects of the training of soldiers. "Annapolis Today" makes a fascinating companion volume of Mr. Banning's book on "West Point."

Baptist Ladies' Aid Anniversary.

The Baptist Ladies' Aid society, organized February 13, 1889, celebrated its 50th anniversary last week with a tea held in the church parlors at which 50 guests were present.

Mrs. Jennie Frans was the only charter member present. Other living charter members are Mrs. William Wolfe, Turlock, Calif.; Mrs. Rocia Davis-Conrad, Eckridge, Kans.; and Mrs. Elsie Davis Ruhman, Dallas, Tex.

The society when organized consisted of nine members and the following officers: Mrs. Vena Lloyd, president; Mrs. Lucy Wiggins, vice-president; Mrs. Vena Wolfe, secretary and Miss Josie Pitman, treasurer.

Mrs. Frans was presented with a golden colored bouquet in a golden vase by the president, Mrs. Joseph Niday in recognition of her 50 years of service.

Mrs. Niday gave an interesting account of the past 12 years work, namely, dinners served, 41; suppers served, 17; banquets, 14; covered dish luncheons, 18; birthday parties, 21; quilts quilted, 124. During those 12 years these ambitious ladies have earned $3,297.97.

Other presidents present were Mrs. W. B. Banning, Mrs. Jess Deport, Mrs. Charles Garrison. Each gave witty responses concerning their term of office.

Refreshments of ice cream, cake and coffee carried a color scheme of yellow.
