Thomas Beck returned Tuesday afternoon from Fredericktown, Missouri, where he was called last week by the death of his mother, Mrs. Anna Beck, 81, a long time resident of that section of Missouri. The funeral services were held last Wednesday at the Lutheran church at Fredericktown and conducted by Rev. Seager, pastor of the departed lady. The burial was at the Christian cemetery.

Anna Wilhelmina Beck, nee Lenickheenen, was born June 30, 1857, in Quincy, Illinois, where on July 26th of that year she was baptized into the Lutheran faith in St. Peter's church by the Rev. Liese. The family later moved to St. Louis where she received instruction and was confirmed in the Lutheran faith. Sometime later she moved with her family to Mine La Motte. In 1874 she entered the holy estate of matrimony with John Beck. To this union eight children were born, one of them dying in infancy. The early part of her life was spent near Mine La Motte, later years near Fredericktown. Her husband preceded her in death and after his passing she operated her farm with the assistance of the children up to the past two years and since which time she has been in failing health.

Throughout her life she was devotedly faithful to the Lutheran church, often traveling many miles to attend services. She was one of the charter members of the Fredericktown congregation, being very active in its organization and support.

Two years ago she suffered a severe illness due to her age, but seemed to have successfully recovered, altho she never regained her wanted strength. Two weeks ago she suddenly became ill and steadily grew worse until her death on Monday, March 13th.

She leaves to mourn her death three daughters, Mrs. Joe Wengler, of Fredericktown, Mrs. Alfred Gilard, Mrs. Frank Budenholzer, of St. Louis, four sons, Tom of Platts-mouth, Nebr., Otto of Sycamore, Illinois, John and Joe of Fredericktown, two half brothers, Fred and Henry Knollhoff of St. Louis, nine grandchildren and many friends.

IN LOVING MEMORY of our darling Donald Gene Baumgart who passed away on March 21, 1938.

The sweetest words written on memory's page,
Was, mama wock me to s'leep.
'Twas said by our loved one
when one year of age,
Mama wock me to s'leep.

But now he is gone, and his prattle no more is heard by the loved ones who weep.
To know that our darling we loved best on earth is down in the valley "a-seep."

Now a year has gone by and we cannot forget
That mama wock me to s'leep.
We think of him lovingly, fondly and yet

That mama wock me to s'leep
Still rings in our earth of a dream of the past, and when our reward we shall reap.
We hope to be with him in Heaven some day,
And there wock our darling to s'leep.

(By an aunt) Mrs. Norman Renner.

Exhibit of Magazine Art to be Shown

Will Be Featured at High School Under Auspices of the Rotary Club April 1 to 14.

An exhibit of modern American magazine art is being featured at the high school beginning April 1 and lasting through the 14th. It is sponsored by the Rotary club of Platts-mouth.

This unique exhibit, which is open to the public, was prepared by The Rotarian magazine, official publication of Rotary International. Its purpose is to give to students and others a practical idea of the type of material, techniques, and development of ideas for use in modern magazines.

The artists whose work is included in the exhibit represent various fields and types of illustration. Among them are W. T. Benda, Polish-American artist and decorative painter, and creator of his famous historic masks; Charles Hargens, portrayor of western and other outdoor subjects; Tony Sarg, humorous story illustrator, creator of his well-known marionettes, author and designer; Henrietta McCaig Starrett, one of the better known feminine illustrators; Raeburn Van Buren, popular in the development of the refined type of illustration; S. J. Woolf, known especially for his unusual portrait sketches in chalk and charcoal; Don Herold, cartoonist; and others of equal prominence.

One pair of the 20 panels takes the observer through various stages of production—from original manuscript, the artist's first sketches, the finished drawings, to the final pages of the magazine. Several panels include personal notes of advice to would-be artists. Splendid opportunity is given to see the various phases of this type of commercial art.

PROPER CONDITIONS PREVENT CANNIBALISM

The temperature in the brooder house is started at 90-95 degrees at the edge of the hover and at floor level. After the first week the temperature is decreased about 5 degrees a week. At eight weeks of age the heat can be removed entirely as the chicks are properly hardened by that time. Proper ventilation is a very important factor. A muslin curtain on the south wall of the house will permit air to filter through and it is quite effective in preventing drafts. The curtain should be brushed frequently to remove dust. Windows can be adjusted according to outside temperature to admit fresh air. As a general rule, at least one window should be partly open all during the brooding season.

Where these conditions are provided, there seems to be little danger of cannibalism.

How to Stop an Outbreak

If cannibalism should start in the brood, the following control measures should be applied PROMPTLY.

- 1—Paint the windows of the brooder house red.
- 2—Lower the temperature of the brooder house so that the proper degree of heat is under the hover and the rest of the room is cool.
- 3—Provide better ventilation (without drafts) in the brooder house.
- 4—Feed MORE milk, green stuff and mash.
- 5—Feed LESS grain, especially corn.
- 6—Keep the chicks active and busy by frequent feedings of green stuff.
- 7—Provide MORE room—at least one-half foot of floor space per chick.
- 8—Move chicks to range if possible. If not possible, provide a deep litter in the brooder house.
- 9—Supply ample feed hopper space. At least one inch of hopper space for small chicks and 2 inches for chicks four weeks old or older.
- 10—Treat injured chicks AT ONCE. Cover all injured parts with Stop Pik or Pine Tar.
