To Be Presented in Omaha

Playing in Omaha at the city auditorium May 1, 2, 3, afternoon and evening, the Lueneu drama is expected to draw crowds from hundreds of neighboring cities.

Omaha has been host to two other Passion Plays before, but both of those were presented in German, according to W. F. Cozad, president of the Omaha Council of Churches, sponsors of the production in Omaha.

"This play, which has been shown in Lueneu, Germany, since 1242, has now been translated into English," Mr. Cozad said.

Josef Meier, who heads the troupe and portrays the Christus, is the seventh in line in six generations of his family to play this role.

First Presented by Monks

Meier, who became an American citizen in 1938, is the first person to translate this age-old story of the Cross into English and bring it to America. He is now 33.

The play was first presented by monks in Lueneu and it wasn't until the 17th century that laymen were permitted to take part. The Meier family has held the leading role for more than 140 years.

Now on tour of the middle west the Passion Play, presented in twenty-two scenes, vividly portrays in colorful, yet gentle manner, the Passion of Jesus Christ.

Carload of Scenery

Each summer, for three months, it will be presented in the Black Hills of South Dakota in an open air setting with hundreds of participants. It is Meier's aim to establish the Black Hills as the permanent home of the Passion Play, in the same way as it has had its home for centuries in Lueneu, Germany.

A full carload of lighting and scenic equipment is necessary to produce the play. Stage settings include the house of Pilate, the Temple, the house where the Last Supper was held, the Crucifixion, and many others. Such scenes as the Last Supper, Gethsemane and the Ascension become glorified paintings with the use of specially constructed lighting and effects.

Reserved tickets may be obtained either by writing to the Council of Churches, Omaha, or at the box office of the Omaha auditorium.

ner by collecting several people's hobbies and presenting them for observation of club members.

Some of the collections included Mrs. Mabel Winn's tea towels, Mrs. Carl Rosenow's canes, Mrs. Vincent's post marks from envelopes and a number of others, such as stamps, etc.

McPetridge, and Misses Ruth Ann Hatt

The Plattsmouth high school baseball team Friday afternoon won from the Weeping Water team at the local park by the score of 5 to 3 in a close game outside of the opening inning when both teams scored.

In the opening of the first the visitors started the fireworks by hitting Noble and who was also wild and granted several passes to the initial sack while errors also gave the visitors the chance to annex two scores.

The Platters in their half of the first took a lead that they held for the rest of the game. Hayes and Noble were on base when Stuart Sedlak laid the ball far down the field for a home run and scoring his team mates ahead of him. E. Gruber, Weeping Water hurler, suffered through errors by his team that helped swell the Plattsmouth scoring.

In the third inning Sedlak was safe on an error and stole second, and Jacobs was put on the bases also with an error. The Weeping Water team by overthrows at the bases enabled the two Platters to cross the plate for the two runs.

In the hurling, Noble had one strikeout in two innings and Jacobs eleven in five frames of the game.
