The city also had a communication from the state fire prevention bureau and in which it gave the results of the check made of city owned property here a few weeks ago. The Perkins House building was found delapidated and not worth repairing, the property at 125 South 4th street was found to need new electric equipment and also window glass. At the scale house on North 5th street wiring changes were recommended and also protection on the floor for the gas heater. This was referred to the tax and properties committee for their action.

Mayor Lushinsky for the board of health announced that cleanup days in the city would be on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, May 11, 12 and 13. It was urged that all of the residents get interested. The ordinance, however, does not repeal any of the anti-peddling features of the other ordinances or provisions of the occupation tax ordinance.

Seek Park Fence

Ordell Hennings, secretary of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, was present and took up with the council the matter of the placing of a fence around Athletic park, one of the projects sponsored by the young men. It was desired that the city give approval of the matter in order that it might be made a NYA or WPA project. There was considerable discussion over the matter. The action of the council at a previous session was read at which time a motion was adopted that the city would agree to sponsor the proposition if the city was not required to furnish the funds and assurance be given that the cost of the fence would be forthcoming from sources outside of the city treasury.

Chairman Webb of the WPA committee, reported that the question of an adequate supply of rock for the Chicago avenue sewer project seemed to be solved as the city had secured a quarry at the Tennant farm near Louisville and where the needed 2,400 yards of rock could be secured. Platters Lose to Madison in Opening Game

Locals Drop Game in State High School Baseball Tournament 4 to 3 in Hard Finish.

The Plattsburgh high school baseball team Thursday afternoon dropped their opening game in the state tournament to Madison by the score of 4 to 3 in a close and exciting finish in which the Madison team by taking advantage of several bobbles at a critical stage gave the foes a one point advantage.

The work of Smith on the mound for the Platters was excellent and he held the seven bingles of the Madison group well scattered and kept his team out in front until the fateful seventh inning.

Jimmie Jones served as the chief batting feature of the day when his double in the third inning brought the Platters out in front as the blow registered a run for the Platters and later Jones scored himself. Bob Hayes hit a long smash in the fourth that seemed destined for a home run but was taken by Schmidt in left garden for Madison in a sensational catch.

The Platters led three to two up into the final inning when the Madison team was able to push over the needed runs, a close decision on the bases making possible the fourth tally for the win.

The box score of the game was as follows:

Physicians of County Authority on Archaeology

Dr. Gilmore, Dr. Kunkel and Late Dr. T. P. Livingston Have All Had Part in Discoveries

Two Cass county physicians have contributed materially to the study of archaeology in Nebraska, according to Fred Minder, field secretary of the Nebraska Press Association. "In compiling our 'Who's Who in Nebraska,' we have discovered many interesting facts about the state," he declares.

"For example, Dr. George Gilmore of Murray, who first became interested in archaeology in 1910, has greatly aided Dr. Earl H. Bell of the University of Nebraska in uncovering and excavating various sites. He and the late Dr. T. P. Livingston of Plattsmouth in 1910 discovered at Rock Bluff the ruins of a prehistoric dwelling.

"Two years later Dr. Gilmore discovered a nine-house prehistoric dwelling in Rock Bluff cemetery. This was excavated by Dr. William Duncan Strong of Smithsonian Institute. In 1933 Dr. Gilmore assisted the University of Nebraska in excavating two house sites near Table Rock."

The Behrens site near Nehawka was excavated in 1935 with Bell in charge. In 1938 Gilmore discovered skeletons of an ancient people in prehistoric mounds near Nehawka. Dr. Lloyd N. Kunkel, with his book "The Archaeology of the Weeping Water Valley," also is a contributor to this field. Minder pointed out. Kunkel has directed the Weeping Water band and Little Symphony orchestra in addition to his writing and practice.

"Who's Who in Nebraska" will provide an invaluable record for homes, newspaper offices and libraries, Minder says. "For the first time it assembles in one volume important facts hitherto unrecorded. It will embody in condensed form the many-sided picture of Nebraska development."

"Cass county has several 'firsts,' as we found in scanning the biographies selected for inclusion. The Ole Olsen quarries at Weeping Water lead the state in limestone production. Andrew F. Sturm established the first business, a lumber yard, in Nehawka, and himself incorporated the town. When he was state senator, he originated and sponsored a bill directing that school children in the state be given free compulsory medical examinations."

Emmons J. Richey, Plattsburgh lumber dealer, is author of a five-year farm relief program suggesting that banks lend money on corn exactly as the government is doing today. President Roosevelt wrote him a letter of appreciation for offering this plan.

"Cass county is to be commended for its interest in reading," Minder remarks. "Miss Olive Jones, Plattsburgh librarian, has given her time and effort that the city might have good books. At one time this library was third largest in the state and had the highest per capita circulation of any member of the American Library association.

"Abraham Lincoln Tidd, Plattsburgh attorney, aided Miss Jones in obtaining funds for the first Carnegie library. He also established the first annual flower show in the city and was instrumental in locating and building the first dock in Nebraska on the Missouri river.

"Men have no monopoly on honors in Cass county. Mrs. Helen Gray Robertson of Plattsburgh was a member of the first Woman's Equal Suffrage League of Lincoln, was the first woman to be a member of the Plattsburgh school board and wrote the criminal code for the state of Idaho.

"Mrs. Viola Norris of Weeping Water, 4-H leader, also has many achievements. She organized and was leader of the first 4-H bird club in the nation; she trained two grand championship teams for the Nebraska state fair, one of which was awarded a trip to the world poultry congress in Canada, and in 1936 she was awarded a merit of honor for rescuing a girl from drowning.

"Other interesting facts regarding the county include: Father George Agius of St. John's church, Plattsburgh, was a classmate in Rome of Pope Pius XII. . . William G. Boedeker, Murray banker, was in Germany in 1938 when Hitler ordered the march into Czechoslovakia. . . Mrs. Emma Bauer Egenberger of Plattsburgh is the only licensed woman real estate dealer in the county. . . Everett E. Day of Weeping

Water, oldest resident listed in the county for our book, introduced the first Hereford and Jersey herds; he was born November 3, 1850. . . Edwin G. Steckley of Weeping Water is a noted commercial hybrid corn producer. . . William Baird of Plattsmouth collects old tombstone inscriptions and poems.

"The youngest resident listed is County Attorney Walter H. Smith, born April 23, 1914. . . Educators run a close second. . . Roger C. Smith, superintendent of Elmwood schools, was born May 23, 1909; E. C. Stimbirt, superintendent of Nehawka schools, was born September 25, 1908.

"Lack of space prohibits mention of many other persons fully as interesting," Minder says. "We are indeed fortunate to be able to include their names in this book."
