Having to Slow Up a Bit
John C. Rauth, who has always been a tireless worker and accustomed to "hitting the ball" as the saying goes, after working unusually hard last week was taken ill and has found it necessary to take a rest. The family physician advised him to slow up a little.

Visited Hybrid Corn Fields
Herman Vogler and a number of others from this vicinity were at Waterloo on Tuesday of last week, where they visited a number of corn fields near that place where growers are specializing in the raising of hybrid corn for seed. In one of the fields, comprising 200 acres, Herman was allowed to select a baker's dozen (13) ears, which he brought home with him and after weighing them, hung them up to dry. When they have dried, he will re-weigh them to ascertain how much the shrink will be. The thirteen ears he brought back with him weighed exactly 13 pounds, or an average of one pound each.

Pickard's Guests Here
A number of years ago there resided in Manley the family of Richard Pickard, who later moved to Falls City, where Mr. Pickard was employed in the Missouri Pacific shops and where they still reside. Early last week, they arrived here, en route to Lincoln to attend the state fair, and spent a short time in Manley renewing acquaintance with their old time friends.
