IN AND AROUND THE TOWN.

TWO ODD FATALITIES.

The overland flyer on the U. P. which arrived at Omaha Wednesday evening was hoodooed on its trip in from Portland. Near Pendleton, Idaho, a man was looking out of the window when the train passed over a bridge, and the man's head struck one of the braces, killing him instantly. Later, at Mountain Home, a man, very much intoxicated, staggered down the aisle, and before a passenger could reach him, had lifted the bar of the vestibule door and jumped off. The names of the men were not known. This is the first time in the history of the Union Pacific railroad that two men have been killed on the same train during the one trip.

MR. EADS IS WELCOME.

C. D. Eads left last Saturday night for Plattsmouth to make final arrangements for his promotion as chief clerk to Superintendent of Motive Power D. Hawksworth. He will take final leave of Alliance next Monday. It was a well earned and deserved promotion, of which his many friends will be glad to learn. Alliance will regret the loss of his family.—Alliance Grip.

THE JOURNAL is pleased to welcome Mr. Eads and family back to Plattsmouth. They will reside on Vine street, corner of Third.

George Middleton, the lithe little Englishman over whom all Omaha went daft for his clever boxing, has made arrangements for opening a class for boxing instructions in this city and will be here on Saturday next to give his first lessons. A class of two dozen has already organized and his time will be spent in this city and Shenandoah, Iowa, where he also has a class. Middleton is an expert boxer and all wishing instructions in the manly art can join the class by leaving their names with Sam Patterson at the Cass County Bank.

A YOUNG GRANDMOTHER.

Eastern papers have been publishing the fact that a Massachusetts lady has become a grandmother at the age of 32, and they speak of her as being the youngest grandmother on record. Silver City, Iowa, however, comes to the front with Mrs. A. J. Wilson, who was made a grandmother when but a month over 31 years of age.—Glenwood Opinion.

W. W. Coates has bought out the postoffice book store and added a fine line of holiday goods, consisting of books, games, Xmas cards, toys, dolls, albums, bibles, etc. Give him a call.

NOT TO BE BLAMED.

A man named W. J. Barr blew out the gas at Plattsmouth, and THE JOURNAL says he hailed from this city. THE JOURNAL is mistaken—the people here are educated.—Nebraska City News.

Yes—educated in pitching horse-shoes and in whittling pine sticks from the top of dry goods boxes, but not in stopping at metropolitan hotels. People who use nothing but candles are not to be blamed after all for "blowing out the gas."

The gross earning for the Burlington for the month ending November 30 shows a decrease of $428,368. From this it is apparent that the hard times have had a worse effect upon the railroads than on private individuals. Under the existing circumstances a reduction in freight rates might have sent every Nebraska railroad to the wall.

The legal fuss over the reward to be paid for the arrest of Hill and Benwell, the Akeson murderers, bids fair to become famous. Thomas Akeson, son of the murdered man, comes into court, and declares that when he arrived in Lincoln he identified the two prisoners Cooper and Malone had as the ones wanted. That the two officers mentioned refused to turn the men over unless the reward was paid. He handed over the $300, and Chief Cooper executed a receipt. Shortly afterwards Joe Conway came to him and demanded the reward, and insisted he was entitled to it. This claim was denied by Cooper and Malone, and to save himself he asked that an addition be put to the receipt providing that the money shall be returned if not right. This was written, he says, by Malone, with Cooper's consent. He asks that he be dismissed from the case, having once paid the reward.—Lincoln News.

When you want news as is news, and news that is reliable, you must consult the old, reliable JOURNAL, the figures in the cost of the murder trial being a case in point.

In commenting editorially on the $400 fee allowed Matthew Gering in the murder cases, yesterday's World-Herald says: "As a matter of fact the allowance of $400 was not exorbitant under the circumstances. And such an allowance is not 'wrong in principle.' It was not for anyone but the defendant's attorney to say whether or not 'both men should have been tried together.' Every man is entitled to a trial which the law has wisely surrounded such investigations. It is to the great credit of Cass county that in spite of the strong feeling against these men they were accorded an absolutely fair trial. To be sure, this was more expensive than a session of Judge Lynch's court would have been, but such expense is one of the necessities of civilization. It will not be necessary for the farmers of Cass county to mortgage their homes to pay taxes if all criminal trials were pushed as vigorously and concluded as speedily as were the trials of Benwell and Hill. It is true that the burden of taxation is increased by the delays in criminal trials, but these two in question do not come under that head. The $400 which the people of Cass county will pay to the energetic young lawyer who watched the interests of these two men will hardly be felt by the individual taxpayer. At the same time the fact that two such murderers, with so strong a sentiment against them, were accorded exact justice and competent legal defense will be something which is certain to redound to the interest of a great and law-abiding community.

A Roast on Wily Tobias.

The reports from Washington indicate that, after all, Bryan is to be recognized in the distribution of patronage. If these reports are corroborated by events, it will be good news for the democrats in this state. When Mr. Bryan recommended so excellent a man as J. D. Calhoun as postmaster at Lincoln it was very nearly an approach to impudence for Tobias Castor, the national committeeman, to attempt to have another man appointed to the place.

It is to be hoped that Mr. Bryan will not only be permitted to name the postmaster at Lincoln, but that he will be permitted to name good men for other places which it is his natural right to be consulted upon.

Through the columns of the Burlington & Missouri organ at Lincoln we have been told for some time that Tobias Castor was the one man who could successfully recommend men to federal positions in this state.

The Washington correspondent of that sheet has held Mr. Castor up as the representative democrat of Nebraska and the one Nebraskan, aside from the secretary of agriculture, who had access to the White house.

While Mr. Castor has posed as the representative democrat, he has not lost an opportunity to cast a reflection upon Bryan's democracy. And of this farce the democrats of this state have become decidedly weary.

It is hardly necessary to say that as a democrat Castor is not entitled to finger the latchet of Bryan's shoes. As a matter of fact the election of "Tobe" Castor as national committeeman was an accident. He was the last man on the face of the earth to be thought of for that position. His selection was a disgrace to the decent democrats of this state and an injury to the party, and the least he could do now would be to refrain from exposing the shame of Nebraska democracy on his frequent trips to the national capital. For years "Tobe" has been known simply as the "right of way agent," otherwise lobbyist, for the Burlington & Missouri railroad. That such a man should be permitted to represent Nebraska democracy would be little less than a shame. Castor's loud boasts of "turning out republicans and turning in democrats" is mere buncombe. He has already secured the appointment of one republican postmaster in Lancaster county, and he did this on the petition of one republican politician. He secured the appointment of his son-in-law—a republican—as receiver of a national bank.

It is high time that the real sentiment of the democrats of this state concerning Castorism be expressed. It is high time that the administration understands that Castor never has nor never will make a move in the interest of democratic success in Nebraska. It is time for the administration to understand that to deliver the patronage in this state into the keeping of this railroad lobbyist is simply to invite the worst possible results to the democratic party.

Castor could not be induced to resign. He cares nothing for the injury he is doing the democracy of this state. It is the privilege, however, of the powers that be at Washington to relieve the distress of their party in Nebraska.

The first step in this direction will be made by the appointment of Calhoun as postmaster at Lincoln.—Omaha World-Herald.

CAPITAL CORRESPONDENCE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2, 1894.—The great contest which is now about to open in congress is over the proposed tariff bill which bears the name of the chairman of the ways and means committee—and is called the Wilson bill. It is, in effect, an effort made to break down the protective tariff system—a system which has had thirty-two years of growth and maturity, and it would be strange, indeed, if it had not attained a great deal of strength and power in the land. The bill now before congress is not a purely revenue tariff measure, but may be called an entering wedge in that direction. Its central idea is based upon free material, and in this line it proposes free iron, coal, lumber, salt, wool, flax, hides and those primary articles which in a crude state enter into the manufacture of all the products of skill and industry that are necessities of the public. Then it largely reduces the rates on the manufactured products to correspond with the reductions made on the raw materials.

No one can make a study of the protective system but must see that it is based upon favor to classes, and that everywhere it promotes monopoly and fosters paternalism, which is the idea that the government should take care of the people. Workingmen in all the various manufactures of the east imagine that it is their right to have the law so framed that they shall be given high wages, and back of them stand the capitalists, who make them believe that prohibitive duties are necessary so that they may enjoy a monopoly of the American market at their own prices, to enable them to pay the wages sought for by their dupes—the workmen—and that if the duties are reduced the wages must come down to the European standard. The hearings given by the ways and means committee to the tariff lords show these things to be true from beginning to end. All the witnesses were very familiar with the difference between the wages paid here and abroad, but scarcely one man could tell anything about the labor cost of an article made here and one made in the lower-wage countries of Europe. The daily wages were easily ascertained, but how much cheaper their men could make a given article than the poorly-paid men of Europe could make the same article, they knew nothing about—in fact one can but think they are purposely ignorant. However that may be, a little investigation discloses the fact that the same doleful prognostications of coming disaster and ruin to manufacturers' interests and to that of the wage-earners now prevail that were heard everywhere, coming from the same classes, at the time the Walker tariff bill of 1846 was pending. After eleven years of trial of that bill, however, one looks in vain through the debates in congress in 1857, when a further reduction of duties was made, for a single word of complaint as to the effect of that beneficent measure. The only criticism made against the Walker tariff was by Henry Wilson of Massachusetts, who argued that the duties on wool should be lowered to give wool manufacturers a small advantage over foreign importers, because the wool and the woolsens were both placed on an equality.

This taking care of people by the government, as the protective duties have done, has led to all sorts of favoritism to individuals in all the departments. Take the agricultural department, as a sample. That whole department was honey-combed with sinecures under Uncle Jerry Rusk, while Mr. Morton has discharged some 600 employes, and is doing far better work, at a saving of $20,000 in his monthly pay roll. Take a sample: One man who was holding down a job at $1,800 a year, looking after Texas fever in cattle, made one single report, embracing one short letter, during the whole year. That letter is on file in the department and is said to be the most expensive document, considering its size, that was ever paid for by Uncle Sam. A little calculation discloses that it cost some $8.50 a word. But the sage of Arbor Lodge dispensed with his services at once. C. W. S.
