The City of Denver the Scene of Warlike Demonstrations.

Result of Gov. Waite's Quarrel with City Officials-State Militia Opposed by Armed Police, Firemen and Deputy Sheriffs.

FEDERAL TROOPS CALLED TO THE SCENE. DENVER, Col., March 17 .- Gov. Waite with a body of state troops on Thursday attempted to forcibly install his new appointees on the fire and police board. He was met by an armed force of police and deputy sheriffs, and a bloody affray was barely averted by the arrival of federal troops and the intervention of prominent citizens.

This critical situation has been brought about by the determination of Gov. Waite to oust the two members of the fire and police board, Jackson Orr and D. J. Martin, for protecting gambling houses, and to place in office their successors, S. D. Barnes and Dennis Mullins. Messrs. Orr and Martin, having obtained from the district court an injunction restrain-ing Gov. Waite from forcibly removing them, were determined to resist to the utmost. Whereupon the governor decided to ignore the court entirely and called upon the militia to assemble. His orders were to proceed to the city hall and take it by force if necessary. The city officials accordingly kept the entire police force at the city hall all day under orders to resist the soldiers if attacked. In addition several hundred of the toughest citizens, many of whom have records as man-killers. were sworn in as deputies by Sheriff Burchinall and placed in the city hall as reinforcement of the police department. Each deputy was armed with two six-shooters and instructed to use them in case of necessity. The police were armed with shotguns in addition to their clubs and revolvers.

It was a most exciting day. Early in the morning the militia, constituting the First regiment Colorado national guards, began to assemble at the armory and the Chaffee light artillery, consisting of three Gatling guns and six ten-pounders, were put in readiness difficulty. At the critical moment, when all efforts of leading citizens of the town had failed to get either side to back down the governor called upon Gen. McCook, commander of the department of Colorado, and the matter of preserving the peace went into the strong hands The bill passed just as it came from of the federal government. Gen. Mc-Cook had been prepared for just such an emergency and the troops at Fort Logan, near this city, were in readiness to march. He wired them to come, and a special train awaiting such an order soon brought five companies of regulars to the scene. At 8:45 p. m. the governor withdrew his forces and issued the following proclamation: "All companies of the national guard of Colorade are hereby notified to be in readiness at the inspection armories to respond to call to come to Denver, which will be issued Friday of DAVIS H. WAITE, Governor. this week.

"DENVER, Col., Thursday, 9 p. m. The withdrawal of the state troops from the scene of action was the result of a conference between Gov. Waite and Adjt. Gen. Tarsney, at which it was decided that it would be impossible to take the city hall with the force at hand without great and unnecessary loss of life.

Gen. McCook announces that he will permit no armed or other interference with the regular course of law. This is equivalent to leaving the old board in peaceful possession of the fire and police departments until ousted by the courts.

in the morning. About 7 o'clock Thursday morning as Sheriff Kryes unlocked the door of the jail to take breakfast in to the prisoners and stepped into the corridor he noticed that the outer door of Puryear's cell was unlocked. At the same time the from the inside could be heard the prisoner jumped from his hiding place and sped out of the open jail door, closed it quickly and locked the sheriff in. He then went out through the kitchen of the jail building, and running across some vacant lots was soon outside the borough limits. The sheriff shouted and attracted the attention of his wife, who unlocked the door and set him free.

A general alarm was at once sent out and an immediate pursuit of the escaped murderer was begun. As he had but a few feet the start of his pursuers there was no possibility of his getting man who had been blown to pieces away. The desperate man swam Mc-Michaels' creek, closely followed by a big negro, who caught him just as he landed on the opposite bank. Puryear resisted, but the sight of a revolver in his captor's hand caused him to yield. He was then brought back across the creek, where he was seized by a crowd that had gathered. Some one in the mob had a rope, which was quickly attached to the limb of a tree, and willing hands swung the desperado up. By some means Puryear | Church of La Madeleine. In addition to killing the bomb-thrower, a number of people who were in his vicinity at the time of the explosion were more or less severely injured.

About the house mentioned a loud explosion was heard inside the church. A crowd of people immediately rushed an upper window, but failed. He next to the church and in a short time the interior of the church and the Place de waited until the sheriff should come in la Madeleine were in a state of great confusion and excitement.

The people who were the first to rush up the steps leading from the place to the main entrance of the church succeeded in entering the building and found it filled with smoke, and shricks and groans of apparently a number of wounded people.

Near a small door on the right of the main entrance the people who were first to enter found shattered human remains. For a time, owing to the smoke and excitement, the people who made this discovery did not dare to penetrate any further. As the smoke cleared away and the people regained their presence of mind, it was seen that the remains were those of a man who was terribly shattered by the explosion. Upon the body of the were found a number of papers and a portrait of Ravachol, the executed anarchist.

When the smoke had cleared away and examination was made of the premises, it was seen that the bomb or infernal machine, which had apparently exploded prematurely while in possession of the anarchist, had done but little damage to the church.

At the Lenten services, which were to have taken place at 4 o'clock, a large number of people would have been present, and the police expressed the opinion that the dead man intended to explode his bomb in the midst of the crowd of worshipers.

There were but few people in the church at the time of the explosion as the hour was too early for the Lenten service, but they were so alarmed that they set up a chorus of cries and groans, which led everybody to believe that the explosion had injured quite a number of them.

The door by which the bomb-thrower must have entered the church, according to the police, was the cause of his death. This door opens and shuts with a heavy swing, and it is believed that the bomb-thrower, pushing upon the door and having the bomb upon his person, forgot or did not know of the strong swing of this door, and, in closing, it struck him and exploded the

The corpse of the bomb thrower has been removed from the church to a morgue. After it arrived there Dr. Alphonso Bertillon made an anthropometrical measurement of the body and found that it coincided with the anarchist Pauwells, who was an intimate friend of the anarchists Bastard and Paul Reclus. A number of rivets similar to those used by skindressers were found on the body, and Pauwells was a skin-dresser. When the corpse was lifted up to be taken to the morgue it was found that one of the hands tightly clasped a revolver. Both hands were badly injured. The bomb was filled with nails and rivets which literally ripped the abdomen of the
