BEHIND JAIL BARS

Sandy Griswold Sent to Jail For Complicity in a Murder.

PRELIMINARY HEARING TODAY

Lindsay and Griswold Have Their Hearing Before Justice Archer at the Court House—Strode the Nominee—Other Notes.

Sandy Griswold was behind the bars over at the Pearl street jail last night in company with Jimmy Lindsey, charged with being an accessory to the murder of Fletcher Robbins.

Late yesterday afternoon when the coroner's inquest had been concluded and the jury had retired to formulate a verdict, Griswold was taken before Judge Archer to be admitted to bail.
The only charge against him at that time was for aiding and abetting at a prize fight, and after the court had fixed his bond at $2,000 and the same had been furnished, Griswold was formally released and in company with his father-in-law and lawyers marched down onto the streets again a free man. It was then near to the time of the departure of the north-bound M.
P. train, and as the party had planned to board that train for Omaha, a hack was hailed to convey them to the M.
P. depot. It was then, however, that Sheriff Eikenbary executed a clever coup. During the proceedings before Justice Archer, the coroner's jury had returned a verdict recommending the prosecution of Lindsey on a charge of murder, and Griswold as accessory.
Lindsay was already in jail, but County Attorney Travis speedily made out a new warrant for Griswold and handed it to Sheriff Eikenbary. It was on the latter warrant that the sheriff informed Griswold that he must be held and his action served as a sort of bomb shell, so great was the consternation within the ranks of the Griswold party. A hasty trip was made to the sheriff's office and after a half hour's consultation Griswold came down and was taken over to the jail and put behind the bars. The man broke down completely when placed in a cell and his sobbings were plainly audible to the large crowd outside, which had witnessed his arrest and had followed to the jail.

The preliminary examination of Lindsay and Griswold was set for this morning, but matters were slow in progressing and the hearing was not commenced until after two o'clock.
The office of Justice Archer was found much too small to accommodate the audience at yesterday's proceedings and the hearing is accordingly being held in the big district court room.
A small army of witnesses have been summoned and as their examination will take considerable time it is hardly possible that the matter will be concluded before tomorrow evening. The charge against both men is an offense which will not admit of their being released on bail and should Justice Archer conclude to bind them over, the men will be forced to await their trial in district court behind the bars at the Pearl street jail.

Verdict of Coroner's Jury.

State of Nebraska,
Cass County,
At an inquisition holden at Plattsmouth in Cass county, on the 14th and 15th of August, 1894, before me, John Clements, coroner of said county, on the body of Fletcher Robbins, lying dead, by the jurors whose names are hereto subscribed, the said jurors upon their oaths do say that the said Fletcher Robbins came to his death by reason of an unlawful, felonious, premeditated, deliberate and malicious assault made upon him by one James Lindsay, real name unknown, and that Fletcher Robbins died from mortal injuries received at the hands of said Lindsay on the night of the 9th of August, 1894, and that one Sandy Griswold, real name unknown, unlawfully, feloniously, purposely and of a deliberate and premeditated malice was then and there present aiding, abetting, comforting, procuring, assisting and maintaining the said James Lindsay in the felonious killing of the said Fletcher Robbins. Signed, GEO. E. DOVEY,

Strode Picks the Plum.
After balloting over twelve hundred times the first district republicans in convention at Nebraska City chose Judge J. B. Strode as the party nominee. The nomination was made in this afternoon's session. On the final ballot Strode had over 90 votes and Chapman 42. The gain made by Strode came from Howe's delegates.

Tariff Bill Frightens Distillers.

John Tighe, gauger for the past six months at the Willow Springs distillery in Omaha, has received notice from Internal Revenue Collector North that his services are needed at Peoria, Ill., and Mr. Tighe departed for that place Wednesday. The new tariff bill as passed by congress on Monday raises the tax on alcohol, and the distilleries all over the country, and especially at Peoria, which town has more of such institutions than any place in the world, are making a special effort to unload all of their product now on hand onto the market before the tariff clause affecting alcohol becomes operative. As a consequence the distillers at Peoria have filed a request with the revenue department for more gaugers, and the request, out of necessity, must be recognized. Peoria already has a large staff of gaugers, but the number will be increased forthwith some twenty men, gaugers going from all over the country. It is nothing short of a slick scheme on the part of the distillers to bunco Uncle Sam.

Where the Fish Go.
The following from yesterday's World-Herald will explain how it is that the fish from La Platte slough are disappearing so rapidly:

"The Nebraska fish commission car 'A' passed over the Burlington Saturday evening enroute from the state hatcheries at La Platte to Lincoln, where it is intended to stock the streams in Lincoln park with 1,000 yearling bass. Fish Commissioner May says that the hatching ponds at La Platte are drying up, and that the young fish will have to be moved to the live streams over the state, where-ever there is a certainty that the fish and game laws will be enforced. Four or five carloads of the young fish will be distributed as soon as possible. The next carload goes to Hastings."

Death of Mrs. Tucker.

After a protracted illness of several months with dropsy, Mrs. Wm. L.
Tucker died this morning at her home on north Sixth street.

Mrs. Sarah Ellen Tucker was born at Knightstown, Indiana, on August 3d, 1831. On June 26, 1850, she was united in marriage to W. L. Tucker in Holt county, Missouri, and afterwards removed to this city where she has since resided.

The funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at five o'clock at the Episcopal church, of which deceased was a member.

is an honor, as well as an ornament to Nebraska's best agricultural the will of the people, together with their deputies, are a genial, courteous lot of gentlemen who seem to take pride in making county visitors feel themselves at home, and notwithstanding the very hot weather, they were all found at their post of duty.

We took great pleasure in examining

REPUBS AT WABASH.

Judge Chapman Names His Delegation Despite the Polkites.

POLK FOR COUNTY ATTORNEY.

Dutton for Commissioner—Judge Chapman Allowed to Select the Delegates to the Congressional Convention—Notes.

Cass County Republicans Convene.

The republicans of Cass held their county convention at Wabash Saturday, and from all accounts it was an exceedingly tame affair, enthusiasm being a stranger to the assembly. The convention was held in the park, a pretty place with plenty of shade trees on every side, and at the conclusion of the convention the delegates were rather thankful to the central committee for giving Wabash the convention, for more pleasant surroundings could not have been secured.

Hon. R. B. Windham of this city was made chairman and R. S. Wilkinson, of Weeping Water, was chosen secretary, and after the usual delay over credentials, the convention got down to business.

The congressional fight showed its hand at the very first and a resolution was introduced giving Judge Chapman, the candidate for the congressional nomination from this county, the right to name his own delegation. The resolution further extended the same right to S. W. Orton to name a delegation of his own to the float representative convention between Cass and Otoe. The Polkites, under ordinary circumstances, would have resisted the extension of this privilege to Judge Chapman, but as C. Sigel Polk had an ax of his own to grind, and as to resist it meant to down the latter and Mr.
Orton, as well, they could do ought but fall in line and help pass the resolution, which was done by a unanimous vote.

There was no contest over the nomination for the state senate, and Orlando Tefft, who seemingly has given up the hope of becoming lieutenant-governor, was given a renomination by acclamation.

John Davies for the house went through by acclamation, but Cooley, the "sweet singer," had an opponent in the person of Peter Eveland. The ballot stood 107 for Cooley and 51 for Eveland, and Cooley's name was also added to the ticket.

The contest over the nomination for county attorney was more interesting, but C. S. Polk won out in four ballots over Jesse Root and Jake Haldeman. The ballots stood as follows:

- First ballot—Polk, 77; Root, 30; Haldeman 50.
- Second ballot—Polk, 77; Root, 33;
Haldeman 47.
- Third ballot—Polk, 77; Root, 48;
Haldeman, 33.
- Fourth ballot—Polk, 98; Root, 48;
Haldeman, 11.

The convention was then adjourned to allow the delegates from the first commissioner's district to make a nomination, and after S. W. Dutton had been put up for the slaughter, the hostilities were called to a close.

vention are: R. B. Windham, Joseph
