After a week of intense suffering the postmaster-generalship. Mary, the twenty-months-old child of Prof. and Mrs. W. N. Halsey, quietly breathed out its life at four o'clock yesterday morning, of cerebral meningitis. During the last five hours of convulsions and then it became so quiet and its pulse so low and indistinct that even its anxious parents knew not when the last spark of life left its body. The sympathy of a large circle of friends of the sorrowing parents goes out to them in their hour of distress. The funeral will take place from the Presbyterian church at two Journal suggests that petitions be o'clock on Friday afternoon, Rev. J. T. Baird, D. D., officiating. House roll No. 60, introduced by Representative Jenkins, prohibiting sale of the in their manufacture, was ressed by the lower house Tuesday by a vote of 80 to 11. Everything points to the bill's adoption by the senate, and the deadly little cigarette will then bid Nebraska a welcome farewell.

The Fremont correspondent of the Lincoln Journal says: "Sheriff Milliken attended the execution of Harry Hill at Plattsmouth last Friday, and speaks of the remarkable nerve displayed by Hill on that occasion. Sheriff Milliken has had some experience executed Shephard and Furst in 1891. Unless the courts or the governor interferes his duty will require him to officiate at the taking off of Charles Carleton on the 26th of this month. Carleton is under sentence of death for the murder of August Gothman.

The state senate has been making a spectacle of itself by refusing to confirm appointments made by Gov. Holcomb. No matter what the pretext, there is no good excuse for such arrant partisanship. The law makes the governor responsible for the appointments of superintendents of certain state institutions, and the senate has no right | iers. to relieve him from this responsibility, which it now seems determined to do.

Jimmie Axtell, a twelve-year-old boy living at Fairbury, will probably die as the result of a gun-shot wound received while out hunting rabbits in including one hundred barrels of whisthe company of a playmate, in whose key and a large amount of farm mahands the gun was accidentally discharged. In the appointment and confirmation of Wm. L. Wilson as postmaster-general a gentleman succeeds a bear. Col. Burton's excellent report of yesterday's execution in his Junction Recorder is somewhat marred by the statement that "Hill's neck was not broken and he died from strangulation." Such was not the case and none are more thankful than the officers whose sad duty it was to conduct the execution.

Three men met on the street yesterterday. One was Dr. A. Mathews, another was a farmer reciding in the western part of the county. Lyman James by name, and the third shall be nameless here. "Do you know where this man and I became acquainted?" asked Mr. James of Dr. M. The latter was ignorant on that point. "I'll tell you," went on the farmer. "In the fall of 1857 he and I dug potatoes, picked apples and pulled osage orange plants together for old Drury Overton, near Knexville, Iowa. He was a boy about 15 years old ond I a little older. We separated then to meet again or three years ago in this town. Both were getting gray and mature in years." Turning to the third member without pain. It box by mail. Hahn's Pharmacy, Omaha, years." 2012 Farnam St., Omaha, Neb. you know where Lyman and I first met?" "No." "Well, it was under peculiar circumstances. It was in the middle of the Platte river, swimming a horse, away out near Ft. Sedgewick, while 500 men were looking on, helpless. My horse was about to give out, when he mounted his horse from the bank which I was endeavoring to reach, plunged into the raging current and came to my rescue. Swimming along side of my exhausted horse, which was already going in a circle, he stuck out one foot and told me to take hold of it and slide off my horse. I couldn't swim a lick, and my chance for life was very slim, but I grasped the proffered foot, let go my horse and in that awful current was pulled along toward shore. Finding that with his weight on the horse's back he could not make the bank he slipped back and grasped the animal's tail and thus we all reached the shore.

I think I owe my life to Lyman. Do you wonder that I remember him?" The writer does not wonder.

The bill providing that attaches of asane asylums shall conduct patients to their place of confinement, has fallen by the way-side, the house having refused to adopt it. The bill threatened to cut quite a slice off the fees of sheriffs, and for that reason the hottest kind of a fight was made against the measure. Its defeat is a good thing for sheriffs, but a bad one for the people.
