ONE THING AND ANOTHER.
The State Journal says: The many friends of J. D. Calhoun will be sorrowful to know that he has decided to remain in Florida. His position on the Tampa Times is both pleasant and profitable and he is doubtless not anxious to exchange it for a situation that might require him to die a second time for the same man. There was something pathetic in his departure from Nebraska, and while the press gang would hail his return with joy, they cannot wonder that he respectfully declines to play the role of a lamb to be offered twice on the same altar. No man will make greater personal sacrifices for a friend than Calhoun, but he has enough discrimination to know when the cup is full.

It's much easier for a man to let go a good job than it is to pick up one. Prosperity is more than some men can stand or, in other words, they never realize when they have a good thing until some other fellow gets it. When a man is doing well he had better hold on to what he has and is certain of then to look for bigger game and often collapse in his effort to find it.

Thomas Wymond, who was one of the pioneer settlers of this city, and at one time rather prominent, left this morning with Commissioner Webber for the county infirmary, where he will end his days.—Nebraska City News.

Ashland proposes soon to be the most noted pleasure resort in Nebraska. A fine steam pleasure boat has been purchased which will have a fine course of five miles up Salt creek to a finely laid out park west of the town. A strong company has taken hold of the matter and will rapidly push it to the front. The boat is expected to be ready for use by Decoration day.

The Pullman sleeping car "Plattsmouth" has been received at the shops here for repairs. The Alliance Grip says: Pullman sleeper "Plattsmouth" in train 42, Wednesday, was discovered on fire in the vestibule when the train was about two miles east of Provo, and was making great headway when it was discovered. How the fire originated is not known, and only the timely discovery is all that saved the car from total destruction. At the rate of speed the train was running it would soon have fanned the small blaze beyond control. The train was stopped and it was necessary to cut several holes in the roof to get water to the fire.

The Nebraska City News says: The annual meeting of the Turnverein for this district will be held in this city on the first Sunday in June. The members are making arrangements for a big time and will have visitors from Plattsmouth, Berlin, Talmage and other places.

John Virgin, of Fairbury, has given the result of the experiment he made in corn raising last summer, that is, as to the results in pulling the suckers. He had 40 acres in corn, and he hired at an expense of 56 cents per acre, men to pull them off, except enough to demonstrate the advisability of following his practice. The corn where the suckers were pulled off averaged 55½ bushels to the acre. That on which the suckers were left averaged 43½ bushels to the acre. The difference, 15 bushels to the acre, made a handsome profit for the work done. The cultivation was alike.

The steamer Capitola Butt, that was used for years at this point as a ferry, was burned at Sioux City on Saturday last, having caught fire from a defective flue while in mid-stream. The boat was owned by Gisler & Talbot, of Sioux City, and valued at $10,000, with but little insurance. The boat was sold about two years ago to these parties by the late Captain Butt. The boat was built at Burlington, Ia., for himself and sons years ago and named after his daughter.—Nebraska City News.

"THE JOURNAL."
The Plattsmouth Daily JOURNAL suspended publication, the result of the foreclosure of a mortgage. D. O. Dwyer is at the helm and will continue the publication of The Weekly JOURNAL on a thorough democratic policy and proposes to keep in the front rank and make it—as it always has been—the best weekly paper in the county.—Weeping Water Regulator.

The Mills county friends of Editor C. W. Sherman of the Plattsmouth JOURNAL will learn with regret that he is again in financial trouble—a $550 mortgage having recently been foreclosed against his paper which is now in the hands of creditors. There is but little prospect that Mr. Sherman will be able to redeem the plant, he having been hopelessly struggling for some time past against financial adversity.—Glenwood Tribune.

Trouble in Norway.
Considerable trouble has arisen between Norway and Sweden owing to the former country's demand for a more extended home rule policy. Norway for many centuries, was an independent kingdom. About the fourteenth century, however, the Norwegian people became weary of constant warfare, and succumbed to the rules of Denmark. When Denmark in 1814 was obliged, owing to her implication in European affairs, to cede certain territory to Sweden, she gave up Norway. Norway objected to becoming a vassal to Sweden, and owing to her rebellion, was allowed considerable freedom in directing her own affairs. King Oscar II., rules as king over both countries. Norway has her own parliament, called the storting, to which by universal suffrage she elects her representatives. Although all measures passed by the storting must receive the signature of the king, a bill can become a law over the king's veto, if passed a third time in the storting. Norway sends representatives to the general parliament of both countries, called the riksdag. Norway is however, dissatisfied, and longs for more power over her own country. She is especially anxious to regulate her own foreign affairs. King Oscar has attempted to smooth matters over, but Norway is unwilling to accept any half way measure. In January last the Norwegian ministry with Emil Stang holding the position as premier, tendered his resignation to King Oscar. Owing to the reluctance of each party to form a new ministry, and the refusal of each party to allow the other the power of attempting it, matters have remained at a standstill as far as the Norwegian parliament is concerned. Rumors of a settlement of Norway's claims by war are occasionally started. The most probable method of settlement will be, it is claimed, according to King Oscar's suggestion. This is that the foreign office be organized on an equal representation of the two countries. That the person chosen for minister of foreign affairs be a native of Norway or Sweden, and that the minister be responsible to a delegation composed of members chosen from each country.

Egyptian Territory.
France and Great Britain have indulged in considerable controversy in regard to their respective rights to certain territory in Egypt. The British Nigger company which controls considerable territory in the valley of the upper Nile in Egypt, complained that the French colonists were infringing on the company's possessions. Sir Edward Gray, secretary of the British foreign office, in a recent speech before the house of commons, made some aggressive statements in regard to the action of the French colonists. Had not the reply which M. Hanotaux made to these statements in the French chamber of deputies been rather mild, considerable trouble might have been brought about. According to the French version of affairs, Great Britain represented in Egypt by Lord Cromer, extends her control of affairs in that country beyond her real power. The khedive of Egypt according to M. Hanotaux, has control of the upper Nile valley, and France is therefore responsible to the former country. The British plan of sending another expedition to Dongoli is the French claim, is only an excuse for gaining control of more territory.

Mrs. Strode's Health Improved.
The many Plattsmouth friends of Mrs. J. B. Strode will be pleased to hear the following, from the Lincoln Daily News:
"It is doubtless a proud moment in a man's life when he is elected to congress, but a greater joy has recently come to Hon. J. B. Strode. For something like twenty years Mrs. Strode has been an invalid, and it is said that for eighteen years, up to about three weeks ago, she had been unable to stand upon her feet. During the past three weeks she has been able to get around some and the other day she came down to his office and surprised him somewhat by informing him that she would not be home to dinner. It had been many years since she had been in a public building of any variety, or anywhere else for that matter except her own home and her couch."

A Memorial Tablet.
The idea of placing a memorial tablet, commemorative of the sending of the first telegraph message, has been suggested by the telegraph historical society. Samuel F. B. Morse, the inventor of the telegraph system, by the aid of the United States government, established a telegraph line between Baltimore and Washington in 1844. On May 24, 1844, the first message was sent from the Baltimore & Ohio railroad station opposite the old Maltby house. The proposed memorial tablet will be placed on this spot, and will be historical in character. It will represent the scene of the laying of the first telegraph line, the instrument used by Morse, and one of the most improved instruments used at the present time, also a profile of the inventor.
