ALL THINGS PASS AWAY.

(Written for THE DAILY JOURNAL.) Are you glad? take comfort quickly, Sorrows follow soon and thickly, Laughter rings and dies away, While you can be blithe and gay.

Have you wealth? be quick to use it, It has wings and you may lose it, And the door of Death is small—One can enter; that is all.

Do you weep another's going? Weep not, friend, there is no knowing; You may be the next to pass In behind Life's looking glass.

Joy and grief and pain and pleasure Are thrown in to fill the measure; Life is short and death is certain, Each must pass behind the curtain.
