HEREAFTER LAND.

(Written for THE JOURNAL.) There's a purple pathway, stretching Out into Hereafter Land, Golden sunlight, softly touching Nodding flowers on either hand; There is ne'er a shadow lying, Hear we only Hope's soft sighing; Birds of Paradise are flying Over in Hereafter Land.

Though with pain your heart be aching, Look into Hereafter Land: Pain, perhaps, of others' making; Naught turns out as you had planned Make dull fact give way to seeming, Of the bliss to come be dreaming. Watch the silver sunlight beaming, Over in Hereafter Land.

Sorrow shall be turned to singing In the sweet Hereafter Land; Death shall lose his power of stinging At Omnipotence's command. Never doubt, they shall be given All the joys for which you've striven; Just beyond the gates of Heaven, Over in Hereafter Land.
