trary. Tyrannical and Capricious on the Part of the Retired Commander, in Whatever Capacity He Acted-The Captain Discharged-Case Will be Ap-

Tie Case of Captain Armes.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11 .- Judge Bradlev of the district supreme court today ordered the discharge from custody of Captain George A. Armes, who was arrested on the order of Lieutenant General Schofield, just prior to the latter's retirement from the command of the army, for having written him an insulting letter. The judge said: "The arrest and taking of Armes into custody, carrying him away from his home to barracks and holding him in close arrest without any antecedent charge of crime preferred in any way against him was and is unjust, unlawful, arbitrary, tyrannical and capricious on the part of General Schofield in whatever capacity he acted, whether acting as lieutenant general or acting secretary of war. The petitioner is discharged.

The judge then went into the matter at considerable length and said: "No charge was preferred against Armes at the time of his arrest, no crime has been charged since, and for the offenses alleged, no arrest was necessary. The arrest and confinement were unlawful and oppressive. As the offense charged would, upon substantiation, result only in reprimand, suspension or dismissal, the possession of the body of the accused was not necessary to carry out the charges, as the bars would have been the case if imprisonment or death was to be the sentence."

Speaking of the president's power in army matters, the judge said: "The president of the United States is commander-in-chief of the officers of the army on the retired list. This function of the chief executive, however, is unaccompanied by harrowing care or weights responsibility. His title of commander-in-chief, so far as it relates to retired officers, is shorn of all power to impose duties, and appears to be an empty name.

The judge advocate general of the war department has determined to take an appeal from the decision of Judge Bradley. This will carry the matter to the court of appeals of the District of Columbia.

MISSIONARIES IN NEED.

The Congregational Home Society in Temporary Financial Straits. NEW YORK, Oct. 11 .- The Congregational Home Missionary society is in lebt to the banks $179,000, its treasury is empty and, inasmuch as only $100,-200 of the indebtedness is secured by collateral, the banks have refused further unsecured loans. The salaries of the home missionaries were due October 1. Failure to receive them means in many cases borrowing of local banks at high rates of interest. The society is absolutely dependent for the time being upon the gifts of thurches and individuals. The present situation is due not only to the hard times, but to the chronic omission of Congregational churches to take their missionary collections in the summer and early fall. The severity "the crisis is great, but temporary.

DURRANT ON THE STAND. He Displays Remarkable Coolness and Nerve During the Ordeal.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 11 .-- Theodore Durrant, assistant superintendent of Emanuel Baptist church Sunday school, was placed on the stand yesterday for the purpose of convincing the jury that he did not murder Blanche Lamont April 3. With the same coolness that has characterized his conduct since his arrest he denied the principal allegations that have been made against him by the most important witnesses for the prosecution. His answers were always brief and to the point and by many were interpreted to mean that he had studied his part well before taking the stand. Questions that would ordinarily case a visible impression on a guilty man were answered by Durrant with the utmost unconcern. Even when Attorney Deuprey asked him if on the 3d of April or at any other time he murdered or participated in murdering Blanche Lamont, the prisoner coolly replied in the negative.

In the Beattie-Price case from the Third Louisiana, for instance, Mr. Price's testimony was delayed by smallpox, which was epidemic in certain parts of his district.

Although no official information has been received to that effect, it is understood at the clerk's office here that R. A. Cheseborough, who filed notice of contest against George B. McClellan of the Twelfth New York, has abandoned his contest. In the other New York cases (Mitchell against Walsh in the Eighth and Campbell against Miner in the Ninth) the contestees have not filed their testimony owing to some local hitch, and Mitchell, it is understood, charges Walsh with attempting to delay the case.

All of the contestants of the thirty cases are Republicans, save Goodrich, who is contesting Cobb's seat in the Fifth Alabama, and Campbell, who is contesting Miner's seat. Goodrich is a Populist, who had the Repulican indorsement, and Campbell ran as an independent Democratic candidate.

General opinion is that the cases of the contestants seated by the next house will have to be very meritorious as the Republican majority is overwhelming and there is no political emergency which would tend to make the members look on contests with anything but an impartial eye to their

LORD SACKVILLE WEST.

The Ex-English Minister Tells of His Mission to America.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10 .- A special cable to the World from London says: An extraordinary and in many respects unprecedented publication by a British or other high diplomat has been discussed during the past few days among the foreign representatives to the court of St. James. This is a handsomely printed pamphlet marked "For Private Circulation Only," and entitled "My Mission to the United States, 81-89," and has just been issued by Lord Sackville, who as Sir Lionel Sackville-Sackville West, K. C. M. G., was the English minister to Washington for the period named.

It will be remembered that President Cleveland, almost on the eve of the election of 1888, sent Sir Lionel his passports because of a letter written by him to an alleged Englishman in California, commenting upon the approaching election. This pamphlet is Lord Sackville's defense and explanation, after seven years, of that inci-

But the unprecedented part of it, and the part of it which has aroused very excited comment is, first, the freedom of his strictures upon the American people and American public men; and, second, this own expressed indignation that the British ministry should have accepted Mr. Bayard as ambassador to this country. while, as secretary of state of the United States. Mr. Bayard had wantonly insulted, in person, its accredited representative.

The pamphlet consists of fifty-two pages, 15,000 words, and is of very limited issue, not more than 100 copies. These have been sent, under seal only, to leading foreigh diplomats and the higher English officials and a few personal friends

Chester A. Arthur was president and James G. Blaine was secretary of state when Lord Sackville came to New York in November, 1881.

At a reception given him by the St. George's society he says that Mr. Blaine was sent to greet him by President Arthur and he made a most cordial address of welceme. Lord Sackville notes also his very cordial reception by the president himself, but remarks: "That while Mr. Blaine was using this conciliatory language he was carrying on hostile controversy with her majesty's governmeat respecting the abrogation of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty.' A presidential election was approaching and Mr. Blaine was likely to be the Republican candidate. "It was at this time that Mr. Blaine spoke to me in the most commendatory tones of the conduct of her majesty's government in dealing with the | sobriquet of the "hero of the crater." Irish question. They had created such | He was commissioned a brigadier gena hostile feeling in the United States | eral in March, 1864, and major general that he felt convinced if the population | in August of the same year. was polled the result would be an almost unanimous expression of hatred towards England. This language clearly indicated his intention to trade upon this hostility to England in order to gain the Irish vote for his election." "He notes Mr. Blaine's defeat with not greatly repressed exultation and says he looked hopefully to the new Democratic administration and Mr. Bayard. The latter, he says, deprecated to him "the influence which the Irish party had obtained in the constituencies and expressed himself as determined not to allow his action to be dictated by it."

He then quotes the Murchison letter and his reply, which he refers to as "incautious," both of which, to his amazement, were published in the New York Tribune, organ of the Republican party, on October 22, 1888. He learned from private sources that no such person as Murchison existed. "The excitement over the Sackville incident, as it was called, became farcial." He was caricatured. He saw Mr. Bayard four days before election and the secretary "cordially accepted my expression of regret at what had occurred. "When, however, I saw Mr. Bayard the following day, he said the matter had become serious, great interests depended upon the re-election of Mr. Cleveland, he could not ignore the injurious effect which my letter had had upon a certain faction, the vote of which was necessary for the success of the Democratic candidate.'

He saw a copy of the telegram from the state department to Minister Phelps, accusing him of "political cowardice." He took this offensive telegram to Mr. Bayard, saying he considered it a personal insult. Mr. Bayard was "embarrassed and confused, and at last said that he knew nothing of any such telegram having been sent." He was furnished with a copy of the following telegram received by a member of the cabinet from the national committee in New York: "Does the president know that the Irish vote is slipping out of our hands because of the diplomatic shillyshallying: see Lamont (the president's secretary and chief wire-puller) at once. Something ought to be done Accordingly he received his passports that afternoon. Lord Sackville quotes a statement he made to Lord Salisbury, accusing Secretary Bayard of flagrant misstatements of facts and of duplicity.

He refers to President Cleveland in bitter terms and adds: "There is no base action which an American politician will not resort to in order to gain an election.'

He quotes a letter in full from a manager of a dime museum in New York offering him $3,000 per week and expenses for himself and suite if he would hold two levees daily of two hours in "my palatial museum."

EX-SENATOR MAHONE.

DEATH OF THE NOTED VIRGIN-

IAN ANNOUNCED. Paralysis the Malady that Carried Him Off-One of the Best Known and Bravest Officers of the Confederate Army During the War-His bensational Exploits in the United States Senate Chamber as a Republican.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9 .- General William Mahone, ex-United States senator from Virginia, died here at 1 o'clock this afternoon from paralysis. He was stricken during the night of September 29 and only partially rallied. His case had been hopeless for some General Mahone emerged from the war with the halo of glory about his name. The citizens of Petersburg, his home, through the city council offered him a lot to build on. It was a recog nition of the services of the gallant Mahone brigade. He was a son of the state and, after Lee and "Stonewall" Jackson, her greatest fighter in the rebellion. The night before the surrender at Appomattox General Lee called Mahone into his tent. There the two went over the situation together. They agreed that surrender was the only thing. General Mahone did not accept the lot offered by the city, but the citizens united again and by subscription bought a house and lot and presented it to Mrs. Mahone. She likewise declined to accept the gift. But the general bought on Market street and built the residence which he had since occupied, together with Mrs. Mahone and his two sons, William and Butler, and his daughter, Mahone and the exploits of the Mahone brigade were celebrated in prose and song. For years the "Little Wizard" was the idol of his people. But he became a Republican. Then the idol of Virginia and of the South was pulled from its pedestal.

General Mahone was the son of a fine old fashioned tavern keeper, who lived on the Jerusalem plank road in the black belt below Petersburg. The boy passed through the Virginia military institute as a free scholarship man and began life as a civil engineer. He built the railroad from Richmond up to the Southern terminus of the Pennsylvania over back of Alexandria. In the rebellion he was known as a hard fighter. For exceptional bravery at the time of the explosion of Grant's mine underneath Lee's works, July 30, 1864, he was given the

This man, who was a major general at 30, took charge, when the war was over, of the railroad which he had built some years before. It was then little more than two streaks of iron rust. He nade it the powerful Rich-mond and Danville. He showed the quality of the born leader at the first start off. He sent the agents of the Adams Express company and of the Baltimore and Ohio flying from his trains and went into the express business himself. He made money and solid popularity all at once. But in the big Richmond Terminal fight the other moguls froze him out. There is a tradition, however, that the general was posted about the movements of the syndicate and made handsomely. There is another tradition that young Butler pocketed a good $50,000 himself. General Mahone made an unsuccessful attempt to secure the nomination for governor of Virginia in 1878, espoused the cause of the Readjuster party and became its leader and by devious methods the object of many an attack, he found a seat in the United States senate in 1880. He served six years in that body, being retired by defeat at the polls. He was like a firebrand cast into a mass of dry tinder, and from the peculiar attitude that he at once assumed he caused one of the most bitter controversies and stubborn deadlocks ever known in the history of that body. He at last acted with the Republicans, and gave them the organization of the senate. His course brought down upon his head the wrath of the Democrats, but the Republicans received him with open arms and the federal patronage in Virginia was turned over to him. Since that time he had been the Republican leader of Virginia. Although he had resided almost constantly in this city since he left the senate, he retained the Republican leadership in Virginia and in 1890 was a candidate for governor. He was best known here of late years by his efforts to secure the purchase by the government for a printing office site of a square of ground owned by him. The quaint figure of its owner was always seen in the lobbies of both house and senate at the close of every session and he was considered a great power in the third house. Exceptionally slight in stature and frame he was a marked man in great assemblages. His peculiar style of dress, and especially his hat, attracted attention to him. This broad brimmed, soft felt head gear seemed out of proportion to the tiny form beneath it.
