AN ARGUMENT FOR FEDERAL RECOGNITION.

enator Call of Florida Addresses the Senate-He Draws a Graphic Picture of the Ruin, Misgovernment and Barbarous Cruelties Against Which the Insurgents Are Contending-A Conference to Be Held.

Speaks Out for Cuba. WASHINGTON, Dec. 6. - When the Senate met to-day Mr. Mills of Texas introduced a bill for the coinage of the silver in the treasury and Mr. Chandler of New Hampshire one for the free coinage of silver at the ratio of 15% to I when England, Germany and France should pass similar laws.

Petitions from Florida for the recognition of Cuba and from the Legislature of Montana against further issues of bonds were presented.

A resolution offered by Mr. Call of Florida was adopted calling upon the Secretary of State for the correspondence relating to the case of General Sanguilly, an American citizen, sentenced to life imprisonment for alleged complicity in the Cuban revolution.

Mr. Gallinger of New Hampshire introduced a resolution declaring that it was the sense of the Senate that it was unwise and inexpedient to retire the green backs.

Mr. Call then addressed the Senate in advocacy of his resolution for the recognition of the belligerency of the Cuban insurgents, and for strict neutrality by the United States in the

Mr. Call drew a graphic picture of the ruin, misgovernment and barberous cruelty against which the Cubans were contending. He described the former revolutions and declared that the progress against tyranny made by the native Cubans who maintained that just government must derive its authority from the consent of the governed, entitled them to recognition as belligerents and the neutrality of other nations. He considered it an outrage that the United States should not hold out an encouraging hand to those who were struggling for indedence. But, instead of speeding the Cubans on their course, he insisted that this government during the Fifty-first Congress, rewas in fact furnishing aid to the Spanish tyrant. "This government," said, emphatically, "is responsible for many of the outrages that have been committed. I do not mean to say that the president and his cabinet are responsible, but the attitude of this gov- | Congressional Committee. ernment negatively, by not recogni ing the revolutionists as belligerents in our ports and territory, is maintaining to-day the power of Spain on the island of Cuba.

In conclusion, Mr. Call described Cuba as the queen of the Antilles, the future center of a confederated repubhe, that would include all the islands of the West Indies, and called upon the committee on foreign affairs to consider his resolution in the spirit of United States forefathers and report it favorably at an early day.

Then at 1:20 the Senate went into executive session and after confirming ex-Senator Matt W. Ransom as minister to Mexico adjourned until Monday.

SENATE COMMITTEES.

Republicans and Democrats Figure or Rearrangement.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6 .- The Republican Senators met in caucus immediately after the adjournment to-day, and Mr. Sherman, chairman of the caucus, announced the selection of the following committee to arrange the committees of the Senate: Mitchell of Oregon. The Democratic members also held a caucus, there being twenty-six senators present. The caucus decided upon the nomination of Senator Harris for president pro tem. in case the Republicans should decide to attempt to elect one of their number to this office. The caveus also authorized the chairman, Mr. Gorman, to appoint a steering committee to fill vacancies left by those who were not re-elected. This committee is to confer with the Republican committee on committees for the purpose of reaching an agreement as to the committees. There were several speeches on the policy of organization of the committees and all were favorable to permitting the Republicans to take them in case they should becide that they wished to do so. REED'S CONTEST PROJECT.

Two Committees Talked of to Push the Cases.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6. - Speaker Reed is considering a plan to divide the work on contested election cases by forming two election committees in the House. This plan, if adopted, would greatly facilitate the work of disposing of the contests before the House and would give to the contestants who may be found to be entitled to seats for which others now hold certificates their rights sooner than they might obtain them otherwise.

There are thirty-two contests on hand, and they will furnish much work for one committee. The business of this committee corresponds largely to that of a court, as it hears all the evidence in every case and then votes upon it and reports to the House.

It is said that the question of economy counts with Mr. Reed in the matter, for when a member is unseated the salary for the position during the time that the contest was pending is paid to both of the claimants, as well as the expenses of conducting the case before the committee.

The general opinion among the House Republicans appears to be that this Congress will be conservative in unseating the thirty-two members whose seats are contested. The Republican majority is so large that there is no need to strain a point in unseating anyone.

IS A MODERN SAUL.

HE HAS PUT THE NATIONAL BANKERS IN ECSTACIES.

His Name Is Aldredge and His Fame Rests on a Speech He Made at Atlanta-Ex-Congressman Bartine Ridicules Him.

Ex-Congressman Bartine in National Bimetallist: The bankers are in ecstacies over a new-found champion in the person of one Aldredge, who made a funny speech at Atlanta

Whether this Aldredge is a very young man and gave the bankers the benefit of his maiden effort, or is one of ripe years who has been hiding his incandescent light under a canopy of extreme modesty, we know not. But we do know that he has emerged from obscurity and electrified a few simpleminded bankers with his wit.

It is unfortunate, though, that he has so much of natural humor in his mind, that unconsciously he allowed it to pervade his entire speech. Some of his most serious propositions were, in fact, the funniest parts of his discourse.

Among other things, he brought out the very remarkable fact, that the farmer is better off with wheat at 50 cents per bushel than he would be with wheat at $1. Then he made it clear to those grave and wise bankers that diminished production is the true road to national prosperity, illustrating it by very cogent references to the recent rise in the price of cotton as a result of a reduced

These discoveries are of such importance to mankind that Judge Aldredge should have indulged in more amplification, and carried them to their logifine cane had been burned and that cal conclusion. If the farmer is better there was no reasons for the action as off with 50-cent wheat than with dollar wheat, then 25-cent wheat will make him still more prosperous, and when it gets down to nothing per bushel, the cup of his happiness will be full. The failure of the great humorist to elucidate this point leaves his magical effort a little incomplete.

> Then with regard to the blessings which have come from the partial failure of the cotton crop. From 9,900,-000 bales last year it has fallen to 6,500,-000 or 7,000,000 this year. Now if a loss of 3,000,000 bales of cotton has so greatly improved business conditions in the south, what a flood tide of prosperity would have rolled over that region if into the hands of receivers at the rate lar qualities of David. But God used this the loss had been 6,000,000 bales! And of two a week; our banks did not fail; period of trial as one means of saving David if it had pleased Divine Providence to our factories were actively employed; destroy it all, the cotton planter would our cities were not filled with hungry be happier even than the farmer who people out of employment, and bank from the great victory begun by the fall sells his wheat for nothing. The incompleteness of the judge's remarks mitting suicide. Suppose we should reupon these points was unfortunate. It | verse the remark above quoted and say leaves the impression that his humor is rather mechanical, and that his logic, adopt the gold standard and sink to the while very good as far as it goes, breaks level of countries like the United States off rather too soon, as it were.

He might have very materially addhave told those assembled philanthro- tries. and that if he could only be permitted | lars. to serve the dear people for nothing, he would then occupy a position of unspeakable bliss. Doubtless he would have used this illustration if he had How Gold Bugs of That City Treat Their thought of it. But we must not be too exacting. Even a new-born champion of sound (?) money cannot be expected to think of everything-and be "funny" at the same time.

He also discovered that the gold standard nations are "bimetallic," because they use silver as "token money" along with their gold, while the silver standard countries are "monometallic" because the use silve alone. Hence he concludes that the gold standard advo-cates are the "bimetallists," while the friends of free coinage are really "silver monometallists.'

He had probably been reading Mr. Carlisle's "five unanswerable propositions," and being struck with a great "idee," he couldn't rest until he laid it before an amazed and admiring world.

But when a "funny" man attempts to become argumentative, he nearly always fails; sometimes because he does not want to spoil his wit by keeping too close to the line of true logic, and sometimes because of ignorance of material facts. Judge Aldredge seems to be ignorant of the difference between "token money" and standard money. He seems to be equally ignorant of the fact that "silver standard" countries make no attempt to use gold and have no need of it. He seems to be totally unconscious that "bimetallism" differs radically from either the gold standard or the silver standard. He is not so ignorant, though, as not to be aware that the only way he could defend the gold standard was by assuming the entire case; and so he cooly took it for granted that the moment we opened our mints to both metals alike, we would land upon the silver basis. Perhaps the greatest joke perpetrated was the statement that he and the gold standard men generally, are the friends of silver, and that the free coinage peo-York to avoid legal entanglements. A were quite a large number of other ple are its enemies. We have a sort of misty recollection of having heard somewhere such expressions as these: "clipped dollar" "90-cent dollar," "70cent dollar," "50-cent dollar," "shortlegged dollar," "dishonest dollar," "swindling dollar," "fraudulent dollar," "buzzard dollar," and many others, and had really never understood these expressions as indicating extreme friendship for the silver dollar. But Judge Aldredge has thown a flood of light upon this point, and it is a pleasure to learn that the friends of "honest money," in using these epithets, were merely exemplifying the truth that "whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth," and that after all they were "pet names in disguise." Still we remain skeptical. To accept Judge Aldredge's statement requires too high a flight into the realms of fancy. We might possibly THE SUNDAY SCHOOL. imagine McKinley as the only true friend of free trade, or Henry George as an earnest consistent champion of LESSON XI, DECEMBER 15protection; we can conceive of Baron Rothschilds as a thoroughly unselfish humanitarian, a highway robber as a conservative of the law, or Annanias as a "God of Truth," but we are not quite able to so completely reverse the ordinary modes of thought as to appreciate Judge Aldredge's rhetorical figure in which the advocates of the gold standard are pictured as the "true friends of silver." It is really no wonder that the bankers went wild with enthusiasm over their new prophet. It most certainly wrought some miracles. And yet it must be confessed that he has not quite settled the silver question. Perhaps he will later on.

MEXICO SATISFIED.

Even Silver Monometallism Has Benefited Our Neighbors. Mexico seems to be well satisfied with her monetary system. There is no reason why she should not be. Although not yet in the front rank of nations, she is improving her condition with marvelous rapidity. So long as she is moving forward with greater relative speed than gold standard nations, it is but natural that she should regard ber monetary system as a good one.

When half-civilized nations upon the silver basis are enjoying greater relative prosperity than the highly civilized gold standard countries, it furnishes conclusive evidence that gold is not the only "honest and sound money." If the believers in the gold standard would open their eyes, the palpable historic truth that nations have lived and prospered for many years at a time without either metal in circulation, it might dawn upon them that all the hopes of humanity do not depend upon the gold dollar.

Speaking of the clap-trap about free coinage sinking the United States to a lower level, the Mexican Financier

There is a good deal of foreign rubbish being printed in foreign papers about the adoption of the silver standard as certain to "sink the United States to the level of China and Mexico." Now we maintain that Mexico can show a better record during the recent "hard times" than the favored land of Uncle Sam. Our railways did not go cashiers were not running away or comthat it would pain us to see Mexico and Monaco!

MORGAN IN CHIGAGO.

Friend.

John W. Doane gave a luncheon yesterday at the Chicago club in honor of J. Pierpont Morgan. The Chicago club is an organization of millionaires, therefore Mr. Morgan was at his ease. When the gentlemen who had been invited to partake of the host's hospitality and exchange compliments with the New York financier had stretched their finely clad legs under the board, Mr. Doane arose and said:

"I propose the health of a man whom Chicago honors as the man who kept intact the treasury gold reserve and prevented the country from going to a silver basis, J. Pierpont Morgan."

Had Mr. Doane cared less for the observance of social form and more for solid truth he would have raised his glass of extra dry and said:

"I propose the health of a man who, with Mr. Belmont and Baron Rothschild, so juggled the money market that the national government was forced to pay him several million dollars for the temporary use of $65,000,000 of gold, which amount is already going back into his pocket. I have no doubt, gentlemen, that our guest is hopeful of again being able in the near future to flimflam Grover Cleveland and John G. Carlisle out of another batch of bonds. Gentlemen, Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan."

Whereupon Mr. Morgan could, with strict regard for truth, have responded after this fashion:

"Fellow millionaires: Were I not otherwise informed I should know, after casting my eyes about this palatial home of our set, that you are firm believers in a sound currency. So am I. With the lead-pipe cinch we have on the money market, aided by our great and good friend in Washington, I see no reason why we should not take a hopeful view of things. I feel confident that it is only a question of time when I and my colleagues will again be called on to keep intact the treasury's gold re-When that time comes, gentlemen, you will find us as patriotic, as loyal to our country, as swift to grab more millions of the people's money as we were last March. DAVID AND JONATHAN.

Golden Text, There Is a Friend That Sticketh Closer Than a Brother-Proverbs. 18:24-The Battles with the Philistines.

NTROD U 0 1 O R Y The lesson for to-day embraces 1 Samuel Time about 20:32-42. 1062 B. C. Place, Royal Palace at Gibeah, near Jerusalem. Saul was still king of Israel. David had lived in the Royal Palace since his victory over Goliath. He was now a captain in Saul's army. Jonathan, son of Saul, and heir to the throne, was "ow 35 years old. The lesson is a most history, in which we can delightfully trace the workings of God's guiding providence, as he leads a young man upward toward his life's work. The friendship of David with Jonathan was linked in many ways to his earlier life, for it could not have existed without what David had grown to be and had done; and but for these things he never could have met the king's son in a way which would make such a friendshop possible. On the other hand, this friendship was the means of saving his life, of elevating his character, of helping him to be loyal to his king, even when that king sought his life. It furnished him with bright cheerful, hopeful, comforting influences amid the long, harsh discipline of the several following years, and it helped to pave the way to David's acceptance by the people as Saul's successor. The friendship of Jonathan and David was one of the most perfect and beautiful ever known. "The soul of Jonathan was knit to the soul of David"; their souls were interwoven together; "and Jonathan loved him as his own soul.'

nteresting and romantic section of David's

H. The Friendship Sealed .- Jonathan, the prince, took off his royal soldier garments, and gave them to David, together with his sword and "his famous bow, which was his special weapon" (2 Sam. I. 22), and his princely girdle. "It has been suggested that the reason of this gift was to enable his friend David, then poorly clad, to appear at his father's court in a fitting dress; but this kind of a present was usual among friends in those remote ages. Glaucus and Diomed, for instance, exchanged armor of a very different value." IV. The Friendship Tested .- Vs. 32-40. The year following the covenant of love with Jonathan, as well as the six succeeding ones, was a year of severe discipline to David. 'A court, and especially an Eastern court, s a perilous place for a young and untried man," and most of all for one with the popubecause God was with him, and he kept close to God. The army had not returned of Goliath, when Saul's jealousy and every evil, selfish passion were inflamed by the sight of the women and maidens who had gone forth, doubtless in holiday attire, to meet the victorious soldiers, "singing the praises of their favorite as they danced before the advancing column, to the music of tambourines and cymbals." "Saul," they sang, "has slain his thousands, but David his tens of thousands." Saul was sometimes troubled by an evil spirit, which wrought him up to an insane frenzy of evil passion. David still sought to soothe him with his music; but the king grew envious of him, for the very reason that David was so good and God so manifestly with him (18: 28). He hated David, and tried in various ways to kill him. Five separate attacks are mentioned in chapters 18 and 19. When Saul learned that his daughter Michal loved the young hero, he used even this love as a means of destroying David, requiring him to kill one hundred Philistines as his dowry. hoping he would perish in the attempt. But this turned to David's advantage, by making him son-in-law to the king. Michal at one time saved David's life by putting a household image in his bed in his place, while he escaped to the aged prophet Samuel in Ramah. Here he was placed in the school of the prophets at Naioth, a part of Ramah. But Saul learned of his retreat and he could no longer remain there. David therefore appealed to Jonathan to help him. On the next day was to be held the usual festival of the new moon (Num. 10: ,10; 28: 11-15), and David was expected to be present. But it was not safe for him to go. But Jonathan at this feast was to make excuses to Saul for David's absence, and thus learn how Saul felt; and then to make known to David the state of affairs by a signal. Saul missed David from the feast, and was insanely angry at Jonathan for making excuses for him. The verses of the lesson begin with Jonathan's reply to his father.

32. And Jonathan answered Saul his father. and said unto him. Wherefore shall he be slain? what hath he done?

33. And Saul cast a javelin at him to smite him: whereby Jonathan knew that it was determined of his father to slay David. 34. So Jonathan arose from the table in fierce anger and did eat no meat the second day of the month: for he was grieved for David, because his father had done him 35. And it came to pass in the morning, that Jonathan went out into the field at the time appointed with David, and a little lad with him. 36. And he said unto his lad. Run, find out the arrows which I shoot. And as the lad ran, he shot an arrow beyond him. 37. And when the lad was come to the place of the arrow which Jonathan had shot. Jonathan cried after the lad and said, Is not
