STARTLING NEWS.

New Combinations Being Formed Against the Gold Standard in Washington.

SENATOR JONES MANEUVERING FOR THE POPULISTS

Don Cameron Will Not Run For Senator in the Republican Party.

[THE INDEPENDENT has been very fortunate in receiving news from Washington from a man holding one of the highest official positions and whose name is a household word on two continents. The news is as startling as unexpected.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8. [Special.]—The forces opposed to plutocracy are gradually coming together. Things are occurring here that to an outsider may have little significance, but to those who know what they mean, are of vast import.

Within a day or two Don Cameron will give to the public a letter in which he will positively decline to be a candidate for re-election to the United States senate. (The letter appeared in Tuesday's papers, ED. INDEPENDENT.) This is the first step in a withdrawal from the republican party. Don Cameron has no more intimate friend than Senator Jones of Nevada. They are in entire accord in their views upon the money question, and within the last few days have had long and earnest consultations, immediately after which, Jones, for the first time, took an open stand with the populists and was the most eager of them all to hold the populists together in a solid body as strictly partisans. All this means something, in fact it means a great deal.

Don Cameron is not as thorough an economist as Jones or Stewart, but there never was a man in the United States upon whom such pressure was brought to bear to make him vote against his convictions of right and duty as upon him. He has withstood them all. He could not be bribed. He could not be coerced. He could not be forest. Every device that the ingenuity of the money power could invent, have been tried and all have failed to move him. He says he will stand for his country and the prosperity of the common people, whatever may happen to him personally.

The plutocracy never did and never will forgive or forget the following sentences in Cameron's speech, delivered in the senate Sept. 24, 1893: "How does this much abused Sherman act injure Pennsylvania? In no way whatever. Under this act we increase the currency now about $36,000,000 a year, barely enough to meet the needs of the natural increase of population."

"I am not, I admit, as a mere matter of personal opinion, especially anxious to see much foreign capital come here."

"If the silver is sacrificed, the manufacturers will be responsible for it."

"I do not want to see the time when what is now passing in England shall happen in Pennsylvania, where a hundred and fifty thousand miners starving for food after a strike which has already lasted two months shall unanimously vote to continue the strike even if they die for it, rather than consent to a reduction of their wages."

"The British Government may prefer to shoot its miners, as it has lately done. I do not think that a senator of the United States should legislate with a view to shooting his constituents."

"I will not vote to ruin Colorado or Nevada. I will vote to help them, and in return I will ask their help to assist the other interests that are struggling throughout the Union for existence against heavy odds. I will vote in such a way as to lighten the many difficulties of the Southern states and aid them to keep abreast of the national movement."

It is whispered around that a great combination is being formed for the overthrow of the gold standard into this combination are coming not only the producing interests, but the great life insurance institutions and the savings banks, many of which are getting dangerously near receiverships. It is said that St. John, president of the Mercantile National bank of New York, who has stood so firmly for the unlimited coinage of silver, is one of the prime workers in this organization. From Senator Jones' maneuvers it is plain that he intends to gather them all into the populist party.
