The amount of the bonds to be voted for this purpose is $20,000 and the plant is to be in connection with the water works. Twice before were bonds voted for this same purpose, but each time there was some legal technicality which prevented the sale of the bonds. It is believed that the proposition will again be carried regardless of the fact that a strong fight is now being waged against it by some who are anxious to have the electric plant owned by a stock company.

ALVIN SAUNDERS IS DEAD. War Governor of Nebraska and Ex-Senator Passes Away.

OMAHA, Nov. 2.—Ex-Governor Alvin Saunders died yesterday at his home on Sherman avenue at the age of 85 years. He passed away easily and naturally and his death seemed to the members of the family gathered around the bedside as though he had merely gone from perfect consciousness into a gentle sleep.

Governor Saunders' death removes one more of the few survivors whose lives connect with the early history of the middle west. He was largely instrumental in the nomination of Abraham Lincoln as president. He was chairman of the Iowa delegation to the national Republican convention held in Chicago in 1860. While others were trying to support Seward and Bates, he exerted all his efforts in behalf of Lincoln, who, as a reward, appointed him governor of the Nebraska territory. The last signature ever written by Lincoln was obtained by Governor Saunders and is the most highly prized souvenir in the possession of the Saunders family. Governor Saunders late in the afternoon of the day of the assassination called upon President Lincoln to get his governor's commission renewed for the second term. The president signed the commission and remarked that he was going to the theater in the evening with a party of friends. Next morning Governor Saunders while on his way to Omaha picked up a morning paper at Pittsburg and was greatly shocked upon reading the news of the assassination. Governor Saunders was closely associated with the late Senator Harlan of Iowa, who was Mrs. Saunders' uncle.

EVACUATE COLENSO

BRITISH FORCES FALL BACK TO EST-COURT FOR FINAL STAND.

Boers Said to Have Lost Eight Hundred In Killed, Wounded and Captured in Engagement at Tatham's Farm—Lady-Smith Is Still Safe.

LONDON, Nov. 7.—This morning's news carries public knowledge with respect to hostilities in South Africa very little further than the evacuation of Colenso and Stormberg. Those villages, taken together with the announcement that the public must not be disappointed should the transports not reach their destination on the date of the public lists, may necessitate some change of date in the army invasion of Natal. It was expected that the army corps would land near Cape Town for an invasion of the Transvaal through the Orange Free State, but the landing may now be diverted to Durban, Natal, whither it is expected Lieutenant General Buller will go in a week or two to investigate the situation for himself. There is also a possibility of a movement through Delagoa bay and the admiralty notice regarding the transports simply means, in all likelihood, that the news of their movement is to be suppressed.

Stormberg was understood to be the depot where stores, tents, guns, ammunition and all the commissariat detail were in process of accumulation. The stores have been removed to Queens-town and an obvious explanation of their removal arises out of the Boer advance from Botsalwa and Alwal North. Reports that Rosmead and Naauwpoort are also to be evacuated seem to corroborate the idea that General Buller's first business will be to relieve Sir George Stewart White.

It is believed that the Orange Free State commanders now have 11,000 men concentrated against Kimberley and on the Free State southern border. Opposed to them are only 7,000 British troops. The towns which lie open to their attack are Alwal North, Burgersdorp, Barley and Molteno.

A dispatch from Pietermaritzburg, dated Friday, reported that railway communication with Ladysmith is severed, the Boers having effected a lodgement at Noltorpe, south of Ladysmith.

Among those invested at Ladysmith are Colonel Rhodes, brother of Cecil Rhodes, Sir John Wighamby, and it is believed, Dr. Jameson, as well as most of the press correspondents and probably the Earl of Ava.

British Evacuate Colenso. EST-COURT, Natal, Nov. 7.—Colenso is now in the hands of the Boers. Before the evacuation was decided on the enemy tried to cut off our outposts. The Durban Light Infantry, under Lieutenant Molynaux, and a force of Dublin Fusiliers, were sent to the relief of the outposts and a brisk fight ensued. The Boers were repulsed, leaving 12 dead. Twenty Boer horses were killed and others stampeded.

The chief motive for the withdrawal, however, was that the long range guns of the Boers had made the position untenable. No orders were received for retirement. While retirement was in progress the Natal volunteers at Fort Wylie had great difficulty in getting away their nine-pounder in the dark. They were advised to spike the gun, but they were unwilling to do this, resolving to make a determined effort to take it with them. While they were running the gun on its carriage down a hill, the ropes broke, and gun and carriage rushed on, the latter being smashed at the bottom of the incline. Nothing daunted, the plucky fellows undertook to carry the weapon itself, which had not been damaged, and they got it home safely.

The Boers shelled Colenso camp at dawn today, being apparently unaware of the evacuation. They looted the stores, but did not harm the bridges, saying that they would want the railway themselves.

The women and children here are crowding the trains bound for Pietermaritzburg and Durban.

Reverse for Boers. PIETERMARITZBURG, Nov. 7.—The general communication of the line of communication with Pietermaritzburg has arrived with his staff at Estcourt. Telegraphic communication north of Estcourt is entirely stopped. The natives report that the Boers received a crushing blow at Ladysmith Thursday. It is reported that the Boers lost 800 in killed, wounded and captured.

BAD CLAZE AT KANSAS CITY.

Half a Million Dollars' Worth of Property Goes Up In Smoke.

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 6.—Half a million dollars' worth of property was destroyed after midnight by fire that started in Jones Brothers' big department store in North Main and Sixth streets and spread to half a block of other buildings in Main and Walnut streets. The aggregate insurance is estimated at $375,000. The heaviest losses are Jones Brothers, who estimate their stock, which was totally destroyed, as worth $300,000. It was the most destructive fire that has ever visited the uptown business district.

The fire started in the building occupied by Jones Brothers, at 551-561 Main street, at shortly after midnight and its inflammable contents burned with remarkable rapidity. Within 20 minutes the entire six stories were a mass of flames and burning embers were being carried by a stiff breeze in all directions. Twenty minutes later part of the Main street front wall fell with a terrific crash. Within a short time the south wall tottered and fell crashing into the Humboldt building, a five-story structure across Sixth street, carrying down part of the latter building. In a little more than an hour after the fire started the Jones stock was entirely destroyed and nothing was left of its building but the foundation. In the meantime the fire had spread south to the Humboldt building, north to the Jones annex and Quinn's grocery, all five-story buildings, and flying embers had caught the old St. James hotel, four stories in height, half a block north on Walnut street, the next street east. The hotel was partially saved but the walls are bulging out and the building will have to be torn down. Absolutely nothing of the stock of the Emmerich Dry Goods company was saved. Two stories of the Quinn building were burned and Quinn's stock was ruined.

JEALOUS MAN'S ACT.

Fatally Shoots His Wife, Wounds Her Parents and Kills Himself.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 6.—In a jealous rage George Barthell, a foreman in the wholesale house of the Simmons Hardware company, fatally shot his wife, beat his wife's father and mother into insensibility and then killed himself. Barthell had been separated from his wife for four years, and during that time had made repeated requests that she return to him, but to no avail. Yesterday Barthell walked into the home of his wife's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Rohlfing, in Eighth street, with a revolver in each hand. Without saying a word he fired a shot at his wife. The ball went wide and Mrs. Barthell fled from the room. Barthell then brought the butt of one of his weapons down with terrific force on old Mr. Rohlfing's head, knocking him insensible. Mrs. Rohlfing endeavored to protect her husband and in the struggle received a broken nose and blows from the weapon that also rendered her unconscious. The man then chased his wife from the house and catching her at the gate, fired three shots, two taking effect in the head, making mortal wounds, and one in the arm. Barthell stood over his wife's fallen form for an instant as if to satisfy himself that she was dead and then blew out his brains.

WHAT THE EAGLE SIGNIFIES.

Why It Was Chosen as the Emblematic Bird of America.

From the Detroit Free Press: In ancient mythology the eagle was believed to carry the souls of the dying to their abode on Mount Olympus and was called the bird of Jove. The eagle was first taken as a symbol of royal power by the ancient Etruscans, who bore its image upon their standard. In the year 87 B. C. a silver eagle, with extended wings, poised on the top of a spear, with a thunderbolt held in its claws, was adopted as the military standard to be borne at the head of their legions by the Romans. At the time of Hadrian a golden eagle was substituted for the silver one. A two-headed eagle was adopted by the Byzantine emperors as a symbol of their control of both the east and the west. The double-headed eagle of Russia was adopted on the marriage of Ivan I. with a Grecian princess of the eastern empire; that of Austria was first used when the emperor of Germany took the title of Roman emperor. The national standard of Russia bears a black eagle, that of Poland a white one. Napoleon I. took a golden eagle for his standard, modeled of pure gold and bearing a thunderbolt, after the pattern of the eagle of the Romans. This standard was disused under the Bourbons, but was restored by a decree of Louis Napoleon in 1852. The eagle was first used on American coins in 1788, on cents and half-cents issued from the Massachusetts mint. It was adopted in the plan of a national coinage as a design upon all gold coins and on the silver dollar, half-dollar and quarter-dollar. The design of the eagle was at one time suggested for the national flag, but was abandoned.

RAILROAD SPIKE AND ITS LUCK

Fortune's Opportunity Develops Out of Man's Craze for Whittling.

Opportunity frequently develops from the most trivial of circumstances. A striking instance of this truism is manifested in the case of a man formerly bereft of the good things of life and now riding the crest of financial prosperity. It all arose from his craze for whittling. Sitting one day in the smoker of a Pullman attached to a western train, he picked up a piece of wood and began idly fashioning it into shape. Perhaps because of the journey, and perhaps, too, from the shape of the wood, it began to assume the form of a railroad spike, the kind used in fastening the iron rails to the wooden ties. When the spike was completed the car was still traveling on its forward way, so to add to his occupation and make it pass the time away the owner of the inventive penknife began to tunnel the wooden spike on each of its four sides until finished it looked like a symmetrical implement with edges resembling the petals of a flower. "Why don't you patent that spike?" quietly asked a prominent railroad official of the party as he watched the development of the stick of wood. "Don't know, I'm sure. Never thought of it. Guess it isn't worth much anyway," replied the whittler laughingly. But the idea clung to his memory even if at the time he had smiled it away as incredible. A year later a friend met him in New York bearing on his person unmistakable signs of the dawn of good fortune. "Yes," he answered, agreeing, "I owe it all to that wooden spike. I took that man's advice when I reached New York, had the thing patented and a few weeks later a railroad company paid me $100,000 for the patent. Queer luck, wasn't it?"

MANILA PIGS AND CHICKENS.

The Former Will Always Attract a Crowd.

One of the curious sights to an American visiting the Chinese and native quarters is the ever-present pig, but as pigs are not allowed at large they have an ingenious method of tying the pigs by the ears, says Manila Freedom. They cut a small hole through the pig's ears, one-half to an inch in diameter; through this hole they insert a rope, with a large knot on one end. This rope securely confines the pig's liberties about the premises. The same sights are also often seen on the native boats and even on the swell launches plying about Manila bay. Transporting pigs through the streets of Manila will always attract a crowd, although the sight is a very common one. The legs of the pig are securely tied together and the pig is then suspended on the long pole resting on the shoulders of two native carriers. The pig, with his legs up and head down, makes about as much noise while in transit as the pig under a gate in the state of Missouri, and never fails to hold the crowd. It is a very common sight to see a hen or a rooster staked out in the doorway of a native house. Game cocks are picked just as the plainman pickets his pony. A string is tied to the leg of the fowl and a small wooden peg is tied to the other end. When the native makes a visit he carries the fowl and when he stops to eat the picket pin is pushed into the ground, and Mr. Chicken is quite at home.

WOMEN POLICEMEN OF LONDON

Queer Occupation of a Crowd of Withered Dames.

London has many queer things in the huge extent of its area, but none queerer than its women guardians of the streets, for London, unknown to most of its inhabitants, has a police force the like of which does not exist in any other city on earth. In order to see it work you must get up very early on Friday morning and visit Covent Garden market. There you will see such a block of traffic and such a crowd of angry and unreasonable drivers that you will not be surprised at the duty of keeping order as an impossible job. But still you will find that things come right in the end, and on looking to find how this is brought about you will probably be shocked to discover that Covent Garden has a police force all to itself in the shape of some hundred or so of old women. They dart in and out among the cars, order the drivers to stop, or back their horses, or move on. They shout and swear and shake their fists and catch the horses' heads and, if necessary, shy turnips or potatoes at the drivers. But they always succeed in having their own way. But for those women it is believed that it would be necessary to read the riot act every Saturday morning in Covent Garden. As it is, the women police make a comfortable living out of their profession, the drivers giving them daily tips, while the proprietors pay them a fair salary.

The Collecting Mania.

Berlin turned an extraordinary exhibition of the collecting mania recently. The German postoffice uses numbers for the months in stamping letters, and on Sept. 9 collectors determined to obtain the usual sequence of nine from district office No. 99, whose stamp on that day would read 99.9.99. A mob of over a thousand persons stood outside the office when it opened, so that the police had to be called on to keep it in order and all available help was sent from the general postoffice to handle the mail matter. The rush continued during the day and at night the police had to use force to disperse the crowd that was awaiting after the closing hours and to enable the officials to leave the office. Sixty thousand pieces of mail were stamped during the day.
