

To Decorate The Church

Corn, wheat and other grains of similar character can be used to outline arches, or form a mass of decoration to their apex...

The altar or pulpit can be draped with ferns which can be found in woodland ways until snow covers them. Among these the berries of the hederacela will show like flowers...

On large spaces such as one generally finds between windows in most churches, panels of evergreen branches can easily be arranged, against which all kinds of fruits can be made to show to fine effect.

The season of the Chambers was over, and the Honorable Mr. Grandcadet, member for Deux-Garconnes, took the fast train, on a pass of course, for his little borough, in order to feel the pulse of public opinion there.

A Repayment

Adapted from the French of Francois Coppée for "After Dinner" by Edith Juliet Rich. The session of the Chambers was over, and the Honorable Mr. Grandcadet, member for Deux-Garconnes, took the fast train, on a pass of course, for his little borough, in order to feel the pulse of public opinion there.

NEBRASKA INDEPENDENT

man of the world, a thorough gentleman, made him the proposition in the most tactful way, of course, that he take part in the financial operations about to be perfected in this important enterprise...

"Yes, but do you not know that 'woman's work is never done'?" There is the baby too! "Yes, Ella, but do you not know that all women have a little to do. If you would only hurry the least little bit, you would accomplish all the work in a much shorter time."

The Tuesday following she received a note saying: Dear Ella—Come immediately. I am very ill. Your mother. E. F. P. When John returned from his work and had read the note, he said: "Go, by all means. I will attend to the housekeeping."

"How would it be," he said to himself, if I tried to get a little sleep. He pulled his cap over his bald head, wrapped a blanket around his legs, stretched himself out full-length and fell into a deep sleep—but his sleep was troubled. Was it the prickles of conscience? More probably, it had been foolish of him to eat rabbit for his dinner at the station restaurant.

At first he was at home, and opened his iron money chest; he had been robbed, and in the place where his big, green-leather purse usually lay, was nothing but an empty old stocking. Then he found himself in the midst of locked desks and the twilight shadows.

"That was too horrible," Mr. Grandcadet started up out of his sleep. Day was beginning to dawn. Mr. Grandcadet recognized the bells and vineyards of his district. "One thing is certain, rabbit does not agree with me," he thought.

When the lady in the front room kept very quiet. She thought she heard some one crying. She listened. It was John. He was talking to himself. He said: "Oh, dear Ella, come back to me again and forgive me, and you shall never hear me boast again!"

What Bandi Would Be "A Seasonable Parable." Translated from the Hungarian for "After Dinner" by Isaac Behn.

At Bandi's home a large company had assembled on the cool veranda and were discussing the situation in China. The unanimous opinion was that the foreign ministers, resident in Pekin, had had no suspicion of the danger threatening them, and of which they were now the victims.

The conversation was interrupted by Bandi in great distress. The boy's clothes were soiled and torn, his face scratched, and his whole appearance betokened that he had been set upon and thoroughly beaten.

CURED.

"Dear me, wife, not done yet? Why, here it is super time, and you are still in your morning wrapper," said Mr. Williams as he came home from his work and found his wife still in deshabille.

"Well, you just go off somewhere and see if you don't find things in apple pie order when you come back." This ended the evening chat.

"The next morning, while Mrs. W. was on her way to her mother's house, John was at home, introduced into the mysteries of the kitchen." "About dinner time he went down into the cellar and soon returned with a large bowl of sweet cream. After placing this on the table he put on his hat and coat and sauntered down to the butcher's after a steak for dinner."

"There is, at least, one thing I'll have for dinner. I'll warm up the potatoes that are left over from yesterday's dinner."

The ringing of the doorbell aroused him, and he, forgetting his ridiculous appearance, rushed to the door. "I have come to call on Mrs. Williams," said the lady who rang the bell. "Mrs. Williams is not at present."

"I am he, madam." "I am he, madam." "I am he, madam." "I am he, madam."

The lady in the front room kept very quiet. She thought she heard some one crying. She listened. It was John. He was talking to himself. He said: "Oh, dear Ella, come back to me again and forgive me, and you shall never hear me boast again!"
