Christian Invasion

What the "Christian" invasion of China has meant to the inhabitants of that country who lived along the line of march is strikingly brought out in a letter from a distinguished American officer to the Countess Cesaresco. which is printed in the London Times. Arriving late, after giving up an important post at home, this soldier found the cities and villages between Tientsin and Pekin "all looted, silent, and empty as the ruins of Ninevah and Babylon;" "not a native in a region lately teeming with human life." Looting, murder and outrage-this was the story on every side, and the whole campaign was to this witness discreditable to the superior race, and very demoralizing to all those who took part. "It is amazing how quickly the instincts of tyranny, the worst characteristics of the slave-driver, are developed in the average man who finds his fellow-men under his unchecked control." In this sentence this officer has put his finger upon the main reason why no man is good enough to rule another against his will, as Lincoln put it. When he is transferred to the Philippines, if he has not already been, he will recognize the same attitude on the part of the invaders toward the invaded, and in it will doubtless find the real reason why our "higher civilization" offers no attractions to the Filipinos. After such treatment of the Chinese by the disciples of the Prince of Peace, as is reported from all sides, we do not see how any missionary could have the heart to attempt to make further conversions to Christianity. The Chinese need but point to the campaign of 1900 to seal his lips and prove that in China, at least, Christians do not practice what they preach.-New York Post.

We hope a bill will pass giving the city council, county commissioners and state board power to pay the bond companies for treasurers' bonds. It is virtually an insurance upon public funds. The Full Dinner Pail Trap-How it Worked With the Very Large Family of Gutes.

Editor Independent: I am an independent in religion, in politics and natural philosophy and I seek the association of such. This is why I have read the Nebraska Independent for the last two years. I have made comparison with the thoughts expressed in many other publications, including England that Lincoln bears to the New York papers, with its expressed opinions and with my own. True religion is something to satisfy a felt necessity. Necessity is the mother of been her favorites, at least enough so faith, for faith is the substance of things hoped for. If there is no necessity we cannot hope for something of great commoner is equally befitting to satisfy it, therefore there can be no hope without necessity. An acquaintance shortly after the election said to me: "Who did you vote for?" I replied that I voted the fusionist ticket. He replied: "Voted for Bryan. You ought to have known that he wouldn't win. English people will mourn more than You were foolish. I voted for McKinley for I was sure he would win."

I looked him over carefully and said:

"If I mistake not your name is Gute." Yes, sir. It is, and I am a fellow who likes a full dinner pail." I replied: "I am aware of that fact and further Now, sir, I did not vote for Mr. Bryan because I thought he would win or lose. I voted for the principles set forth in the platform that he represented. As for the full dinner pail, it was held out to deceive the people to entice them to sell their birthright to liberty. I am no Esau. I will not sell my birthright for a mess of pottage. The most of the republican speeches that I heard or had the honor to read put me in mind of a man going into a pasture with a bucket with a few grains of corn in it to catch a horse. He calls the horse and shakes the bucket and the poor, foolish brute follows the dictates of his stomach, not his brains, and goes up and forfeits his liberty for a few grains of corn. What did the man catch the horse for? To ride him, and for the same purpose the republican leaders held out the In one of Carpenter's recent letters full dinner pail, to you, Gutes.
