The same paper is Byron's gloomy picture of the rise son that it might have caused trouble for the Portuguese government. Now, then, here is a bit of history: General Buller went to South Africa to eat a First freedom and then glory-when Christmas dinner in Pretoria; he lost every battle in which he was engaged against the Boers; he was taken prisoner by his enemies; he had to leave all his medals and decorations of honcr, which he had received during his military career, in the hands of Genparole. and he was finally received in England as a great hero! Sic transit gloria mundi!

Save the Banks

In the house of representatives last week Mr. Richardson refused unaninious consent for the consideration of a bill extending national bank charters and Chairman Brosius of the committee on banking stated that the charters of 1,713 national banks would expire on July 14, 1902, under the nious consent for the consideration of expire on July 14, 1902, under the twenty-year limit. The committee on rules probably will report a rule under which the bill will be put through under the gag law. Mr. Richardson's objection only delayed the bill.

The opportunity thus presented to relieve the country of the national banking system would be an excellent one, were it not for the fact that all financial legislation is based on the idea of continuance for an indefinite period of that system. The Independent would have these banks of issue discontinued and all money, whether gold, silver or paper. issued by the government. It would not have a national debt to support it. It would not require the people to pay double interest before it got into circulation. The present system has been forced upon the country by the banking sharks and congress has taken no action to put another in its place. The closing of 1,700 banks would doubtless cause a financial crash, but there is no necessity to close them. Congress could within a week adopt a system to take their places Let them continue as banks of loans and discounts, but take away from them the power to issue money and put a greenback in the place of every bank note retired. No such thing will be done. The national bank charters will be renewed and they will be left in power for another generation.
