A brand of difficult end-game coming to us via the Pittsburgh Express. Naper has an eye for the beautiful. From the Yorkshire (Eng.) Post by O. SOLUTIONS. Problem No. 47, by Very, key B-B 7. Carpenter, author's solution Q-R 6, etc. Teed, Q-R 7. Aspa, B-R 6, etc. Peterson, Q-Q B 3, etc. Westbury, Q-Q 8. Fox, B-R, etc. Dalton, Kt-Q 2, etc. Total 22 points. The Westbury problem is a two-mover, but was erroneously classed as a three-er. Asent the Tiffin Tribune problem, my Signor Aspa, Mr. Gansser says: "This problem appeared in the Boston Sunday Post of September 20, 1900; the composer was Mr. B. F. Bass, Chelsea, Mass. Can this be a plagiarism?" It might be a coincidence—such things occur.

The Carpenter three-er is unsound, yielding also to Q-B 4, K-B 7; Q-K R 4 ch, K-B 3; Q-K mate; or P-B 7; Kt any but K sq; K-K 8; Q-B mate. Mr. Oldham, who sends this solution, having in mind our motto that week says: "The root represents Morgan's surplus capital—not needed; and the moves of the knight, his manifold resources." Neat.

Dr. Dalton's three-er comes in for its full share of praise: "Difficult, beautiful and original."—Gamage. "The continuation, 2. R-Q 5 ch, BxR, etc., is original and very fine."—Barry.

GAME STUDIES. Ret. Leader Turney, commenting on the strength of the Ruy Lopez, believes that it is based on the idea of castling quickly and using the early developing rook in the same before black has had an opportunity to bring up his reinforcements. That the K B should go somewhere at move 3 is certain, if early castling is desired. "The objection to K 2 and Q 3 are so apparent that they need not be fully specified; both are obstructive and hinder white from deploying his other forces." B-B 4 he believes is not so good as B-Kt 5 because black can attack the bishop in a variety of ways and at the same time assist in his own development. At Kt 5 the B can be immediately attacked only by Kt-Q 3 or P-Q R 3, neither of which gains any time for black, and really points to 3. Kt-B 3 (the Berlin) as black's best defense.

Should Have a Chromo

Editor Independent: Don't you think that this legislature deserves a chromo? Isn't its work just ended sufficient to make every republican hide his head in shame. After quarrelling among themselves the whole winter term, then for the leading candidates to have to compromise and elect the governor and a fellow-banker! If the pops want a good campaign document the history of this legislature will furnish it. From it we can all know Rosewater and the dirty sheet he prints. Melkiojohn is no better. He can't carry his own county and they are all of a "whatness," and belong to some railroad corporation or combine. They forced the legislature to allow them to elect a candidate. They surely owned the legislature and if they owned it, the B. & M. and U. P. also own it. That being the case, we are in a very tight box. L. H. D.

IN ANCIENT PRISONS.

UNDERGROUND DUNGEONS OCCUPIED BY PRISONERS.

Of All Gloomy and Terrible Dungeons Those of St. Michael Are Perhaps the Most Hideous and Awful—A Post Imprisoned.

When we examine ancient prisons beneath the keep of a Norman fortress or the palace of Venetian doges, we wonder what race of beings could possibly have endured all the squalor, filth, horror and privations which must have been the lot of the unfortunate persons confined in these places, says a writer in the Gentleman's Magazine. And yet month by month and year by year, they lived on. But of all gloomy and terrible dungeons those of Mont St. Michel are perhaps the most hideous and awful. Those who entered them might well sigh their fond adieux to hope and liberty. Few visitors to Mont St. Michel are likely to forget this fearful prison within a prison, so associated is it with horror, cruel tortures and death. The cage is hung in a dark sepulchral chamber, high the cave-like holes in the rock which furnished the cells for less distinguished prisoners than those who were confined in the cage. Most of the sub-structures in the southwest portion of the fort were built by Robert de Toringul who ruled as Abbot at the end of the twelfth century. Between the kitchens and the prison is the beautiful crypt of the Aquilon designed by Roger II, about the same period. Passing through this noble chamber with its six massive columns, we enter the prison, and in a recess in the walls hangs the "Cage de Fer." It is composed of thick beams of wood, held together by strong iron bars, which would defy the most determined efforts to escape. Caged singing birds are allowed to enjoy the sunlight which inspires their songs and renders pleasant their captivity. But the unhappy victims of the iron cage were in almost total darkness. Day followed day and year succeeded to year, but it was all the same to them—no continued existence of gloom, torture and horror. Such a life must inevitably have shattered reason. . . . In 1749 there lived in Paris a young poet named Deforges or Desforges. After the fatal rising of 1745 in England, the young Pretender fled to France and found a welcome and safety in the French capital. Negotiations, however, were made by the English government for his arrest, and the French king yielded to their demands. In the crowded opera house one evening the last of the Stuarts was arrested, and Deforges was present at the time. Indignant at this violation of the sacred rights of hospitality, he believed that the honor of his nation was compromised, and at once proceeded to pour forth his complaints against the injustice of the act in bitter and venomous verse. His poem began with the lines: Peuple, jadis si fier, aujourd'hui si servile, Des princes malheureux tu n'es done plus l'asile!

The line, "All is wicked in these places, ministers and mistresses," especially aroused the anger of the court, and caused Madame de Pompadour to fly into violent fit of passion. Such plain language was too much for the susceptibility of the kind and his ministers. The enraged poet was discovered and doomed to perpetual imprisonment in "Le Cage de Fer." For three long years he was confined in this terrible cell, the floor of which was only eight feet square; a faint glimmer of light contrived to find its way through certain crevices in the ceiling, but only sufficient to make the darkness visible. The poor poet endured his terrible punishment with courage and resignation, and won the heart of his gaoler, M. de Broglie, the Abbe contrived that Deforges should be released from the cage for the Abbey, and exchanged him from his prison. He wisely took great precautions lest the sudden return to the light of day after so long a sojourn in darkness should cause blindness. Nor did the good abbe's kind offices cease. He procured for him his release after five years' imprisonment, obtained for him in the office of secretary to Marechal de Broglie, his brother, and on the death of Madame de Pompadour, Desforges became commissioner of war. In this case, happily, death was not the only release afforded to the victims of the iron cage.

Secretary Saves Employer's Pay.

In view of the production of Edward Elgar's musical setting to the late Cardinal Newman's "Dream of Gerontius" at the Birmingham festival, English papers recall that in all probability it is owing to the carefulness of a private secretary that the epic was preserved. When the cardinal had finished his poem he was so dissatisfied with his work that he threw it into the waste-paper basket. Here, at any rate, it was found by the secretary, who, in accordance with his practice, had had the basket thoroughly overhauled before the contents were consigned to the dustbin.

Two-Thirds of Stomach Gone.

William Johnson of Waukesha, Wis., has for years been afflicted with stomach trouble, and finally went to a Milwaukee hospital, where it was found that he was suffering from cancer. An operation was performed, the surgeon cutting away two-thirds of the stomach. Johnson is now up and about and we long will be able to eat as usual. In several recorded cases the entire stomach has been removed, but Johnson's experience is said to be unique.
