Citizens of Oklahoma, New Mexico and Arizona Can't Come Into the States and Vote-They are Without a Country

Editor Independent: Will the effect of the recent decision of the United States supreme court on the Porto Rican cases end in "our new possessions?" Will it not change the status of millions of people who have hitherto been citizens of the United States and whose rights under the constitution have been unquestioned? It would seem, according to the decision, that Arizona, New Mexico, and Oklahoma, were also outside the United States, and while their inhabitants are not foreigners, they are not citizens of the United States, but are people without a country. Moreover they can become citizens only by congress granting statehood to them, for provision is made for naturalizing only foreigners, and according to the decision they are not foreigners. ization of the army and a general and owns a pretty home. dismissal for incompetency is absolutely demanded. The reported lack of discipline is a disgrace to the army and to the nation that tolerates it and puts us to open shame in the eyes of the world. In order to make a case if true should make the authorities blush with shame for their inability to administer discipline among a few hundred soldiers at any army post. If the officers allow such stories to go forth with their connivance and without denial they should be summarily court-martialed for their incompetency. And a secretary of war who would allow such conditions to exist without calling the incompetent officers to account disgraces his high office and can't have our soldier boys under better discipline than is represented, of what use is such an army? The disgraceful drunken rows that have been reported from Fort Sherithis dan and other places may not be all the fault of the officers. McKinley's new army is largely made up of bums from the cities. It is a well-known fact that the true manhood of America refused to enlist for a war of conquestespecially the farmer boys would have nothing to do with it. The men may be of such a class that it is impossible to make decent soldiers out of them.

Waking Up

Sound and sane men everywhere, in the business world and in the economic and sociological departments of the universities, have been sending forth notes of warning very frequently of late. The Independent has frequently called attention to the effort to capitalize all our industries upon the earnings of a favorable year and pointed that it was an impossibility to so organize in trusts that capital would get from two to three times as much as it ever got before from the creations of wealth, by the simple means of capitalizing industrial plants for from a hundred per cent to five hundred per cent more than their real value. Mc-Kinley is personally the most popular president we have had in a long time, and he has certainly most creditably performed the duties of his high office. I think it is time, furthermore, to demolish the fiction that there is an unwritten law established by Washington that the president of the United States may not accept a third term. The facts are, as any student of the times may discover, that it was fear of defeat which impelled Washington to decline a third nomination. Being a federalist, he was the object of very violent attacks on the part of the democrats of his day, and recognizing the growing strength of his opponents he doubted,
