THE CUBANS SURRENDER

They Obey the Orders of McKinley a Take the Unadulterated Platt Amendment.

The Cuban constitutional conventio last Wednesday accepted the Pla amondment by a vote of sixteen t eleven. The resolution to accept wa carried without discussion.

immediately after the opening of th session Senors Tamayo, Gilleunda and Quesada, constituting a majorit of the committee on relations, sul mitted as a substitute for the commit tee's former report the Platt amend ment as passed by congress, recom mending that it be adopted and mad an appendix to the constitution.

In the vote on the resolution the twenty-seven delegates present vote as follows:

Aye-Senors Capote, Villeupras, Jos M. Gomez, . Tamayo. Monteaguedo, Delgado, Betancourt, Giberga, Lorente, Quesada, Sanguilly, Nunez, Rodriguez, Berriel, Quilzel and Ferrer.

No-Senors Zayas, Alleman, Eudaldo Tamayo, Juan Gualberto Gomez, Cisneros, Silvala, Fortun, Lacret, Portuondo, Castro and Manduley.

Senors Rivera, Correoso, Gener and Robau were absent.

The latter two voted against acceptance in the previous division. Senor Ferrer voted with the conservatives, explaining his change of attitude by asserting that he believed acceptance would be the best solution of the problem. The convention will now appoint a commission to draw up the electoral law, PanicsF ollow Over-Capitalization.

While at the present time we are enjoying what may be justly termed as unprecedented prosperity, yet as everything has a limit, so there is a limit to it, and as the wave that rises highest on the beach flow: farthest out to sea, so the most disastrous panic we have ever faced in the history of this country is liable to occur in the next decade

Ordinarily, the financial depressions in this country have fallen at intervals of twenty years, with one exception, and that was the panic of 1873. The panic of 1857 followed the one of 1837, and the panic of 1893 followed the one of 1873. According to the analogy thus established, the next panic would be due in 1913, but as conditions brought about by the civil war, caused a great fluctuation in all kinds of values, and also brought about new economic conditions, precipitating the pathic of 1873 four years before it would ordinarily have been due, conditions point to a financial crisis arising before its analogous time.

The daily press is filled with the news of gigantic enterprises, of great combinations of capital, real and fictitious, created for the centralization of wealth. The greater the centralization of wealth, the more people who are dependent on that centralized wealth for support. As the natural consequence of such centralization, in the diminishing of the actual number of real value holders and the consequent increase in the number of dependents.

The tendency of the above conditions and the rapidity with which great business ventures are completed these days, would suggest to the mind that twenty years will not elapse from the period of the last panic until the next one. Please note the following extracts taken from a New York Associated press dispatch of April 4th:

"The speculative spirit had apparently run wild and no feat seemed too good to attempt in the feverish imaginstion of the excited speculators. The boldness and ecklessness of the manipulation, however, probably were never equalied on the New York stock exchange, and variations of a point or more between sales were viewed with much equamity. Blocks of thousands of shares of mock were tossed backward and forward, and millions of dollars were ventured with no more concern than though pennics were being pitched. News of actual conditions of properties played no part whatever in the speculation."

There is much more in the article that goes to show to what a reckless excess stock gambling had reached. but notice the last sentence particularly. Actual conditions, or in other words, actual values played no part. Gambling is frowned on by all good people, yet here we have a game played for the weal or woe of a numerous people, and who objects?

The history of every panic in this country has seen that, its primary cause was the creation of fictitious values, and there of course, are meated by speculation. These fictitious valnes appeared more enormous in 1893. but never have they invaded all the industries of the country as fully as at the present time, por have they ever reached such gigantic proportions

The increase in stock values reach into the handreds of millions of dollars in the last two or three y arshow much of it real, one can only guess. Many men have been made enormously wealthy by these transactions; many will be beggared before they are finally completed, but the present result is the creation of a set of people who live extravagantly, who are wasteful and thoughtless of the future, and who are bound to entail

ing without receiving any increase in his earning capacity. More people will be employed, and be self-supporting, but in the long run the ordinary prople are impoverished by the demands made upon their earnings. The remedy must come from the people, as has the remody for all great national ills in the past-but how, and when it will come, is rather more than present conditions would warrant predicting, but it seems a long way off yet .- W. L. French, in Locomotive Firemen's Magazine.
